

From the Dean

Florida Supreme Court Justice Ricky Polston ('87) welcomed new 1Ls to campus during orientation.

Last Friday, we started officially welcoming new students to campus with our orientation for LL.M. students. Joining us this semester are foreign-trained lawyers from countries including Bangladesh, China, Ghana, Haiti, Italy, Jamaica, and Spain, who are pursuing the LL.M. in American Law degree. This Monday, we began our one-week orientation for new 1Ls. Tropical Storm Fred forced us to meet virtually on Monday, but we were able to gather in person during the rest of the week. The 1L orientation schedule included a welcome from Justice Ricky Polston ('87), Contracts classes, faculty panels featuring the 1L professors, sessions that allowed new students to meet 2Ls, 3Ls, and members of the administration, behind-the-scenes tours of the Florida Supreme Court, professionalism panels, and an "Inclusion & Civility in Law School and the Legal Profession" session. The 1L class is extremely impressive and I am looking forward to bragging about them in next week's issue of the newsletter. Today, we are hosting our final orientation with special programming for new transfer students. Many thanks to all of the faculty and staff members who helped orient our new students. We are delighted to welcome everyone to campus and are looking forward to an excellent year!

Employers Interview FSU Law Students

Employers are recruiting FSU Law students through the fall 2021 interview program.

During the first week of August, FSU Law began hosting employers for the fall 2021 interview program. More than 80 employers have already signed up for the program to recruit students virtually and in person for summer clerkships and post-graduation positions. Participating employers include large and small law firms, state attorney and public defender offices, businesses, and government agencies. During the first few weeks of the interview program, the Career Services Office has received very positive feedback from employers about students they have interviewed, and students have already been scheduled for second interviews. The interview program runs until November 5, so there is still time to sign up to recruit FSU Law students. Employers can visit the FSU Law website to register and can contact the Career Services Office at careerservices@law.fsu.edu with any questions. Prime dates for interviews typically fill up fast, so the Career Services Office recommends registering as soon as possible.

"I cherish the education and opportunities that I received at Florida State University College of Law. I remember the first steps I took into the building on my first day of law school, but didn't realize then that those steps would be the first in a long journey that would lead me to my current role at Shutts. Our firm has a rich history dating back to its founding with a retainer from our first client, Henry Flagler, 111 years ago. I'm greatly honored to be chosen as managing partner by the firm and I'm eternally grateful to the College of Law for providing the opportunities that led me here."

Field of Law Sought: Open to any practice area, but particularly interested in family law

Marin Donnelly is from Tampa, Florida, and she earned her bachelor's degree in telecommunications from the University of Florida. She will graduate from FSU Law in the spring of 2022. She also helped create a session "yearbook" summarizing session highlights for representatives to make available to their constituents. The summer before her 2L year, Donnelly held a remote externship with HD Supply in Tallahassee, where she worked closely with their in-house counsel and performed employment law research.

At FSU Law, Donnelly is a student ambassador for the Admissions Office. "As I am entering my final year of law school, I can't help but look back with immense gratitude for the education I received from faculty and fellow students. During my time at FSU Law, I learned not only what kind of lawyer I want to be but also how I can use my services to make a positive impact. I look forward to applying these lessons throughout my legal career."
