A Fall of Bittersweet Memories and Inspiring Advances

Steve Gey

In the Spring of 2007, this magazine included a story about Steve Gey's many contributions to the law school and his affliction with ALS. The students on the Law Review ran a special tribute to his work, alums have participated in triathlons in his honor, and students, faculty and alums rallied to his side. After a phenomenal life, Steve passed on June 9th. Early this fall, the academic year began with a memorial here at the law school in honor of Steve. Our entire community and Steve's family got to share recollections about Steve and how much he has done for the school and for everyone around him. This issue of Florida State Law includes photographic images of that ceremony.

Bill VanDercreek

Alums closest to our Moot Court Team know that Bill VanDercreek has recently been told he has only a short time remaining with us. Since he got the news, Bill has been nothing short of inspirational. He states repeatedly that he is lucky that his form of cancer leaves him in no pain. He is free to spend his remaining days with people he loves and reflecting with them on the times they have shared together in a life he has loved. Many alums and former faculty, especially Moot Court alums, have rallied around him to make his final time with us a period of celebration of a life well-led. I am sure he would love to hear from you if he hasn't already.

Advocacy and Negotiation Successes

It is fitting that, this fall, the Moot Court Team, which Bill founded, has hit another all-time high and has taken the seeds Bill planted and cultivated them to full bloom. As our cover story reveals, our Moot Court students this year first won the North American Space Law Competition, in Washington, D.C., and went on to win the world title in Cape Town, South Africa, in October.

In early November, our Mock Trial students won first place in the Florida Justice Association's E. Earle Zehmer Mock Trial Competition, in Tampa. This is the second year in a row our students have taken this first-place title.

In mid-November, a team fielded by our Dispute Resolution Society won first place at the Southeastern Regional Negotiation Competition, sponsored by the American Bar Association. The winning team will now advance to the National Competition, which will be held in New Orleans in February.

Just Plain Fun

The student successes are a result of their vision and hard work. Make no mistake about it, though, our students still know how to have fun. My favorite piece of fun is taking place as I write this column, immediately prior to Homecoming. The students call it "Rivalry Week" because it celebrates the rivalry between our students who were undergraduates at Florida State and our students who were undergraduates at the University of Florida. Garnet and Gold bunting has been hung on one side of our atrium and Orange and Blue bunting on the other. Signs abound celebrating allegiance to the athletic team of one school or the other. Earlier this week, our male FSU alums claimed victory at dodge ball over our male UF alums. This afternoon, our female students who were Florida State undergraduates are playing "powder-puff football" against our female students who were undergraduates at UF. The Village Green is lined with cheering students from a huge range of undergraduate institutions.

Another thing that has been fun for me this week is inspecting the interior of the vacated First District Court of Appeal as our complete remodel of it nears completion. The new courtrooms are especially beautiful and will stand as a lasting tribute to our advocacy teams. Suffice it to say that the photos of the addition in this issue fail to do justice to how nice it will be. I promise you that you will like it!

Sincerely,

MOOT COURT TEAM Brings Home International Championship!

By Christi N. Morgan

In October, the Florida State University College of Law Moot Court Team accomplished an unprecedented feat. It was victorious in an international advocacy competition – the World Finals of the 2011 Manfred Lachs Space Law Moot Court Competition.

Team members Tanya Cronau, a 3L from Port St. John and Cape Canaveral, Florida, Lynn Guery, a 3L from Fort Lauderdale, Florida, and Anne Marie Rossi ('11), from Tampa, Florida, traveled to South Africa for the competition. They ultimately ended up arguing in the finals before three justices of the International Court of Justice at the High Court of Cape Town, South Africa. No one took for granted that Florida State would win, although the team's impressive record in national competitions gave grounds for hope. When the College of Law was announced the winning team, the students were overcome with emotion.

"I cried," said Cronau. "It was extremely overwhelming. We put in so much work for this, more work than I've put into a lot of things, to be honest. So it was like a weight was being lifted off my shoulders. It finally paid off."

When news of the team's victory made it back to Tallahassee, the law school community was elated. "We were all thrilled when Florida State won the right to represent North America," said Dean Don Weidner. "To be the global winner has us all walking on cloud nine."

To fully appreciate this accomplishment, one should know about the students' hard work leading up to the October 6 finals.

The team was assembled by Moot Court advisor Nat Stern, the John W. & Ashley E. Frost Professor of Law, during the summer of 2010. Stern also assigned the trio to the space law competition, which is based on a hypothetical space law dispute before the International Court of Justice teams that he coaches," said Professor Stern. "His deep insight into legal issues generated in practice arguments and endless patience for critique ensure that his teams will be thoroughly prepared for competition."

In advance of the North American Regional competition, held in Wash-and sponsored annually by the International Institute of Space Law. He then matched them with proven coach Arthur Stern (no relation to Professor Stern), a Tallahassee attorney who had coached Florida State students to multiple national victories.

"Arthur brings extraordinary legal intellect and total commitment to the ington, D.C., in April, the team wrote and submitted two briefs – one for each side of the issue. To obtain critiques and perfect the arguments, the trio also practiced before nine separate panels comprised of professors, students and practitioners.

"We sought the assistance of faculty, who were extremely helpful and candid with their feedback as to the quality of our arguments,” said Guery. “They provided ample suggestions as to how to frame our arguments better so that they were more persuasive.”

The team, accompanied by Professor Stern, competed in three rounds at the regionals. They bested Georgetown in the finals for the right to represent North America in the international competition.

“It was a big hill to climb,” said Coach Stern. “You are talking about competing against some very high caliber teams – schools the likes of Georgetown, UVA, George Washington and teams with space law programs.

To be number one out of this group is always an uphill climb.”

“Our team members not only performed superbly at the competition, but also represented the school in an utterly professional manner,” said Professor Stern. “I never enter a competition predicting that our team will win; competition is stiff at the national level, and judging is personal. After the team’s terrific performance in the final round, though, I was guardedly optimistic that the judges would give FSU an edge, even over the truly impressive team from Georgetown.”

With the North American title in hand, the trio turned to preparing for the international competition.

As required, they refined their briefs and resubmitted them. Then, during August and September, the team held seven panel practices to get additional feedback from students and faculty members. On September 29, they boarded a plane for South Africa.

“The competition is part of a big international conference that brings in the top people in the world in the fields of aeronautics and space,” said Coach Stern, who accompanied the team to South Africa. “They make a big deal out of it.”

Since there were three teams competing for the world title, Florida State had to compete twice to win the competition. After defeating Saint Petersburg State University (Russia), the winner of the European regional, in the semi-finals, the team outscored the National University of Singapore, the winner of the Asia Pacific regional, in the final round.

“I think our defining edge in that competition was our overall knowledge of international law, not just space law,” said Rossi, who argued with Cronau in

“Cape Town is a beautiful city, the coastline is gorgeous,” said Rossi. “There is so much there in the way of cultures and food and people. the finals. “We noted that FSU was the only team to cite cases from the ICJ in oral arguments. When they were announcing the decision, the judges said that they were very impressed with the knowledge of jurisprudence of the court.”

The thrill of winning the competition was only one highlight of the trip to South Africa. The team made the most of its time in the country. Members went on a safari, where they were chased by an elephant, they touched a lion and they visited Cape Point, the southern-most point on the west coast of South Africa.

In addition to winning Florida State’s first international moot court competition and experiencing once-in-a-lifetime sightseeing opportunities, team members also made valuable contacts in South Africa.

“We were approached by many advocates, prominent scholars as well as recruiters who wanted to recruit us for LL.M. programs,” said Guery. “It was definitely a wonderful opportunity to get exposure in the international law field. And to come together and network with some of the most prolific individuals in that field.”

Even though the students won’t have an opportunity to repeat their feat, the Moot Court Team, as well as Professor Stern and Coach Stern, already has their sights set on the 2012 international competition. Team members Ashley Hoffman and Kendra McCan, who will compete in the 2012 competition, have already begun preparing. Next year’s international finals will take place in Milan, Italy. ■

Markenzy Lapointe: Living the American Dream

By Christi N. Morgan

His resume includes bachelor's and law degrees from Florida State University, service in the United States Marine Corps – including a tour in Iraq during Operation Desert Storm and earning the National Defense Service Medal – a clerkship at the Florida Supreme Court and service as an Assistant U.S. Attorney. Markenzy Lapointe also was recently named partner at Boies, Schiller & Flexner LLP in Miami, where he specializes in commercial and federal criminal litigation and high-risk product liability. On paper, Lapointe sounds like many other hard-working law partners at firms around the nation, but his background is probably very different.

Coming to America from Haiti at age 16 and not speaking English when he arrived, achieving such a high level of success is remarkable. Through hard work and determination, Lapointe's is a story of overcoming obstacles and living the American Dream.

“My story is no different from many others,” said a modest Lapointe, whose family settled in Liberty City, a major inner-city area in Miami, upon arriving in the United States. “My mother had a second grade education and my father wasn't around. I guess going to law school was an extension of the belief instilled in me as a very young boy that education was the only good card for people like me from very humble circumstances. You weren't guaranteed to succeed with an education, but you likely would not succeed without one. So, while going to law school came out of my appreciation for the law and its rich history in this country, it was also motivated by my desire to change the socioeconomic dynamics from which I came.”

One of Lapointe’s most cherished academic accomplishments is an article he published in a Rutgers law journal during his 3L year. While that article was the impetus for his clerkship with Florida Supreme Court Justice Harry Lee Anstead, it also meant a great deal to Lapointe because not many years earlier, he had been teaching himself English by reading the Miami Herald and using homemade flashcards taped to his refrigerator.

“It was a big deal for me to have that sort of validation from editors who had no idea who I was, given that not long ago I could barely speak English,” said the 1999 College of Law graduate. “But it turned out an even bigger deal for the faculty and Dean Weidner, who told me he knew a judge who could use someone with good research and writing skills and would forward my resume and article to him. The rest is history, as I ended up with the experience and training of a lifetime working for Justice Anstead.”

When his clerkship ended, Lapointe worked for a year in private practice before becoming an Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of Florida. The work was especially gratifying because it allowed him to help the community his family had settled in when it came to America.

“Working for the Department of Justice is the greatest job one can have. It was a special job for me, because I lived in Liberty City for many years and watched how the drug trade kept a community in total decay,” said Lapointe. “I watched people I grew up with, and was very close to, get entangled in its tentacles. I also remember the guns and the violence that came with that. Yet, lots of good people in the neighborhood just wanted to have a decent place for their children. So being part of the solution both in prosecuting the bad elements and reaching out was personally meaningful to me.”

Lapointe also was recently able to help a family from his homeland. Even though his workload at Boies, Schiller & Flexner is demanding, Lapointe took a pro bono case representing a baby girl from Haiti after the country’s January 2010 earthquake. The child – “Baby Jenny” – was discovered among the ruins in Port-au-Prince and transported to Miami for emergency care.

“What had the potential to be a nagging, international custody dispute with claims from parents in Haiti and officials stateside ended up with the reunification of baby and parents in Miami, after hundreds of hours of dealing with state, federal and international authorities,” said the South Floridian. “It was very satisfying.”

Family is very important to Lapointe. He is the oldest of five siblings and watched his mother work extremely hard to provide a better life for her children.

“I’ve watched her make lemonade out of lemons literally and figuratively for years,” said Lapointe of his single mother. “She always remained positive and could come up with a joke in the hardest of times.”

Now that he has a family of his own, Lapointe strives to be the father he never

Family Lawyer Kim Picazio Makes an Impact in the Courtroom, at Home and on the Airwaves

By Christi N. Morgan

top family lawyers in South Florida, her reputation precedes her. And these days, Picazio is known for a different look.

“My firm is kind of known for pink legal pads,” said Picazio, who uses the pads as an intimidation tool. “We don’t write on them – we know our cases that well; we just come into a deposition with a pink pad and stilettos. I teach my attorneys and staff not to rely on a script; to question people as they would their boyfriend or mother. You have to listen and you’ll catch things.”

Picazio, who was named a 2012 “Top Lawyer” in field of family law by the South Florida Legal Guide, learned to litigate from people she considers some of the best legal minds in the state. Before opening Kim L. Picazio, P.A. in 2002, she was an associate at Heinrich Gordon Hargrove Weihe & James, P.A. for a year and then spent six years at the Law Office of Robert D. Hertzberg fine-tuning her robust in-court litigation skills.

“I knew I wanted to litigate,” said Picazio, who did not even take Family Law at Florida State. “I love to change people’s minds, I love to talk, I love to debate, I like to give people different perspectives and to turn their thinking around. And I can do that in a courtroom and in depositions. I was a very good writer, but I wanted to use my mouth to change things.”

At Heinrich, she was involved in

When University of Miami graduate Kim Picazio arrived on Florida State Law’s campus in 1992, she did not look like the other students, much less the lawyers and legislators she was surrounded by in downtown Tallahassee. She quickly realized that her look – which included neon stretch pants and a blonde ponytail perched high upon her head – was not appropriate.

“That was fine at University of Miami, but that was not fine at Florida State,” said the Ft. Lauderdale native. “It was time to throw off the ponytail and stretch pants and to be a lawyer.”

Picazio (’95) no longer needs to wear neon to garner attention. As one of the many high-profile cases, including those for Big Tobacco, CSX and Bell South. As she was the “littlest man on the totem pole,” she was primarily responsible for writing legal briefs and motions.

“That first year I was writing a lot, trying to impress the associates who were above me. I knew that I was not going to be getting into court anytime soon,” said Picazio. “The senior partner in that firm, Richard Gordon, had a reputation as being mean as a snake. However, I believed then, and believe now, that he was one of the best at what he did. Although I had respect for him and a healthy amount of intimidation, I kept on bebopping my way into the senior partner’s office, saying, ‘When can I get into court?’ One time, with a smirk on his face, he just said, ‘Come with me.’ He took me to a room and there was a deponent waiting and a court reporter.”

Gordon gave Picazio the basics of the case and looked at her and said, “Go ahead. Question the witness.” She found the holes in the deponent’s case and impressed Gordon enough to be given opportunities to work on some of the largest cases in the office.

When Picazio moved to the smaller Hertzberg firm, she finally got a taste of the courtroom.

One of her first trials was representing the restaurant Joe’s Stone Crab against a class of women represented by the EEOC. The federal case involved allegations of discriminatory hiring practices toward women. Ironically, during her three weeks in the courtroom, Picazio was about eight months pregnant.

“The case involved complex constitutional arguments about equal rights, the 14th amendment, and about discrimination in the workplace,” said Picazio. “I really got my feet wet, and conducted over 50 depositions of potential class members. I spent night after night speaking with constitutional law professors, soaking up their intrinsic understanding and love for constitutional analysis. I listened and learned the intricacies of constitutional law to be ready and able to argue any position that was thrown my way. There is no one who, in my opinion, would be a better lawyer in the courtroom than a professor. I was very pregnant, but I put my heart and my soul into that case and was inspired by the highly publicized lawsuit that required a high level of skill, strategy and deep understanding of constitutional law.”

Knowledge learned from great litigators and law professors, along with a self-professed drive that earned her a spot in the top 10 percent of her 1995 graduating class, catapulted Picazio into position to open her family and matrimonial law firm in 2002. Picazio thrives on the competitive nature of her practice, because she loves to win.

“I am one of the most aggressive child custody lawyers in town,” said Picazio. “I love doing domestic violence cases because it’s fast, highly strategic and requires quick-to-the-draw litigation skills. It’s a fast-paced, mud-slinging environment that I love to be able to calm down, control and to guide. I love to take a case where it looks like my client is about to lose custody because maybe their spouse is setting up an environment for them to fail, and to bring the light to the truth and to turn it around. There is nothing better than to empower your client with knowledge, and good lawyering.”

The aggressive, yet respectful way Picazio conducts business has made her a natural fit for media commentary. She started appearing on television news programs a few years ago when she represented the biological mother of a missing child on a pro bono basis.

“I was on the news a lot,” said Picazio. “I did local news and national news – did the Nancy Grace show nearly every night. After that case they continued to ask me back on whenever they needed a commentator about high-profile crimes. I was able to entertain and argue with other commentators without being insulting. I continue to be asked back to commentate for CNN Headline News and other media networks – commentating on the Casey Anthony trial recently, as well as an appearance on the Dr. Drew Show about the investigation into missing baby Lisa.”

Picazio’s children TiVo their mother’s television appearances and are proud of her accomplishments. Even with her 60-hour work weeks, Picazio makes her three children a top priority. Picazio and her husband of 16 years, Michael, are parents to 14-year old son Sonny, 11-year-old daughter Stella and 5-year-old daughter Sloan. Nightly family dinner discussions about friends, teachers and “playground happenings” allow Picazio to stay involved with her kids, and to guide and direct them. Enjoying throwing a Frisbee in the yard, and attending her children’s extracurricular events, keeps her life balanced.

The value Picazio places on her

Phil Blank: Leading a Law Firm and a Family into Law

By Christi N. Morgan

F. Philip “Phil” Blank’s spacious downtown Tallahassee law office tells many stories. The signed baseballs and bats speak to his support of the Joe DiMaggio Children’s Hospital. The autographed photograph of a young Lawton Chiles taken during his first U.S. Senate campaign signals a passion for state politics and a longstanding relationship between Blank and the former governor. The prominently displayed images of Blank, wife Rita and their children are an indication of Blank’s dedication to family. The cigars and blue mug filled with dirt from Cuba are a reminder of Blank’s past.

“Growing up in Cuba, for a while, was great,” said the La Habana native. “Castro took over in January of 1959. About 3 or 6 months after that, you would turn on the TV and you got to see public trials of people who worked for the Batista regime, followed by the public executions. The trials were very vivid – the way the witnesses recounted torture experiences they had been subjected to or seen.

“Then you come to this country. I remember during the Gore/Bush recount, I woke up and came downtown to work and saw news trucks along the street. I was used to getting up in the morning in Cuba and going to school and seeing tanks. It makes you appreciate what you’ve got.”

Blank’s family fled to Florida when he was 10 years old. After settling in Tampa, Blank’s father, William, bought a 20-bed hospital in Ybor City. There, Blank first learned the importance of hard work.

“I did everything. I was an orderly, I worked in the lab, in the x-ray department and the business office for a while. I never worked in the OR; they wouldn't let me.”

When Blank started law school in 1972, his work ethic followed him. He started working as a janitor at the Florida House of Representatives during his 1L year. Blank then held several staff positions and eventually became general counsel after graduating from law school.

Blank had no idea he was starting a family tradition when he graduated from the College of Law in 1975. Since then, four additional members of the Blank family have studied law in Tallahassee. Among them are Blank's daughter, Robyn Blank Jackson ('06), who is an assistant general counsel at Florida State; niece Belinda Caspi Wiseman ('88), who is managing director for Laffey Fine Homes in Syosset, New York; niece Alissa Blank Meyers ('03), an assistant general counsel at the Florida Department of Environmental Protection; and nephew Michael Blank, who is a 1L.

The elder Blank counseled each about the opportunities law school affords. He feels a great sense of indebtedness to Florida State for “giving me a chance” and therefore stays very involved. He especially enjoys talking with students.

“If it wasn't for the law school, I wouldn't have any of this,” said Blank. “I've got to pay my debt. If I don't help those kids, they don't get a chance. That's what this country is about.”

Blank took a chance and entered private practice in 1975. When he realized no one would hire him, he opened his own firm. Blank spent most of his time traveling around town, talking to people to try to obtain work.

“When I left the House of Representatives, my first client was a guy named William Hill — a janitor in the House,” said Blank. “He paid $100 to get a divorce.”

Since the early days when he would consider any case, his practice has evolved into the more specialized areas of health law and computer litigation. Blank's health law practice benefits from his experience working at his father's hospital. “I was able to learn what hospitals were about, so the legal concepts of regulatory law involving hospitals meshed together with the substantive commerce concepts,” said Blank. “I tell students to try to find an area of commerce that you like and that will lead you to the area of law that you will enjoy practicing.”

The Blank & Meenan, P.A. founding shareholder enjoys talking business and legal strategy with the health providers that comprise a large portion of his current clientele and his other clients.

“The most fun part is understanding what they want to do and trying to figure out the puzzle,” said Blank. “That's what this is — it's all puzzles. Often there is no right or wrong answer; it's just puzzles or mazes. You've got to weave your way through things. If you are good at playing Frogger, you'll be a good lawyer.”

Blank met his wife Rita on a blind date when they were both undergraduates at the University of South Florida. Ironically, Blank was working in Tallahassee at the time and drove to Tampa for the double date. They married a month before Blank entered law school. In addition to their daughter, Robyn, they have a son, Bryan, who is the director of information security for Sony On Line in San Diego.

It is easy to imagine that one of Robyn or Bryan's future children will carry on the family tradition and graduate from the College of Law in a generation. ■

Rick Rumrell Faithfully Practices Law

By Christi N. Morgan

About 25 years ago, Richard “Rick” Rumrell re-evaluated his value system. Since that time, he has tried to devote much of his attention to spiritual matters. In turn, his law practice has changed. Rumrell would argue that is how it should be.

“I’ve had the opportunity to talk about the relationship between what lawyers used to be, which were also the priests in the church,” said the Rumrell Law shareholder, who spoke about Christian ethics in Ukraine after the fall of Communism. “The church and the law were the same. So there is the uniqueness about law because it is spiritually based and it has the difference between the ethical obligation of right and wrong. If you’ve done a wrong — negligence — you are liable for the damages of that wrong. If you’ve done something wrong on the criminal side, you are subject to criminal penalties for committing that wrong. Either way the basis for reaching that result comes from a single source. Our purpose as lawyers is more than just representing clients to get a win; it is to uphold the relationship between the purpose of the law and the giver of the law.”

When Rumrell began practicing law in the early 1970s, the bulk of his practice was maritime law and other civil law cases. Over time, his practice has evolved to include a significant amount of commercial litigation and complex civil litigation work.

“I always believed that I would do civil trial work rather than criminal work,” said Rumrell. “I did a few criminal cases after leaving the State Attorney’s office. One case involved a teenager I represented who had never had a criminal offense, but who was given a substantial sentence, even though it was his first offense, due to the randomness of having a particular judge. I was offended by the injustice. Because of sentences like this, the Florida Legislature some years later created uniform sentencing guidelines.”

His first civil jury trial — a malicious prosecution case — went all the way to the Florida Supreme Court. The case established a still standing precedent for the difference between a general and special verdict. Rumrell argued and won the case at the trial court level and eventually that verdict was upheld at the state’s highest court. Since then, Rumrell has been instrumental in several other precedent-setting cases. He was involved in the Casa Clara case, which established the economic law doctrine for Florida. His firm also represented the state’s insured interests in the Skyway Bridge disaster.

Rumrell’s practice has taken him across the country and around the world. He has a significant amount of work in London, which was initiated when he practiced at the law firm of Smathers & Thompson.

“Smathers & Thompson had a very significant practice of representing insurance companies in the New York City area,” said Rumrell, who eventually left Smathers & Thompson to form Smathers & Rumrell. “I was representing some clients who had a London-based operation. While I was over there representing my international client who had a London base, I started meeting with various London insurers and that led to the rest of my practice there. I became very good friends with solicitors and then ended up getting an LL.M. in Advanced Litigation from Nottingham Law School of Nottingham-Trent University.”

An assignment for his LL.M. program allowed Rumrell to test his belief that people should move outside of their comfort zones.

“The past chairman of IBM said that, the only thing he regretted was not failing more,” recounted Rumrell. “What he meant was, if you get out of your comfort zone and try things that may result in failure, you’re going to learn how to succeed better than just staying in your comfort zone. I felt the same way in my law practice, but you can’t really take a risk with a client’s work. But in law school, or in any university — especially post graduate — that is a place where you can take a risk that could result in failure and not have consequences that are going to injure anyone other than yourself.”

As the only U.S. student in his LL.M. class, Rumrell was assigned to serve as a one-person team for a mock trial exercise. He relished the challenge and took the opportunity to put into practice that philosophy. Rumrell memorized all of the pages and lines of statements he would be using to prove his case so he could recite them — as required in an English trial — without referencing notes.

“I sent back all of my papers to my office in Florida two days before the trial so I could not depend on them either in my room or at the trial,” recalled Rumrell. “When I got up to do my presentation, I moved the podium aside and just started talking. I pretty well pulled it off.”

When Rumrell was a law student, he accomplished something even more successful — meeting his future wife, Jo. They met when Jo also was a law student at Florida State. Because Rumrell took a year-long break from law school to help Lawton Chiles get elected to the U.S. Senate, Rumrell graduated a year after the rest of his Class of 1970 cohorts. His professional ambition did not delay his personal aspirations, though. He proposed to Jo in 1969, on the day Neil Armstrong walked on the moon. They were married in December of the same year.

“I always told her I’d marry her if they landed a man on the moon,” joked Rumrell. Their younger son, Dylan, lobbies in St. Augustine and their elder son, Jason, works in golf course management and maintenance in Palatka.

The couple resides in St. Augustine, where their primary home is located, and Key West. Rumrell has offices and clients in both locations.

Rumrell strives to let his spiritual values guide all aspects of his life. He wants to deal with his clients, opposing counsel and others the way he would want to be treated: with fairness and respect. “The real goal is to seek justice.” ■

REMEMBERING PROFESSOR GEY

Close to 200 alumni, students and friends attended the memorial, along with Gey's wife and other family members. Dean Don Weidner spoke about Gey's instrumental contributions to the law school's scholarly atmosphere. Kristina Klein ('06), speaking on behalf of Gey's students, shared her memories of the beloved professor — including his perfectly tailored grey suits and his entertaining lectures. Gey's best friend from Columbia Law School, John Danforth, talked about Gey's days as a law student and practicing law in New York City. Faculty speakers were Lesley Wexler, a former professor at Florida State, and Rob Atkinson, a longtime friend and colleague of Gey's. Wexler recalled two lessons Gey taught her: 1) You are what you do, and 2) Expression matters. Atkinson brought some levity to the service with a hypothetical story about Gey's final judgment. Marsha Gey Shaw, Gey's cousin, and Irene Trakas, Gey's wife, were the final speakers. Both ladies shared memories of Gey and thanked the law school family for its support. Weidner also presented Trakas with the Class of '66 Award.

Following the service, there was a reception in the Rotunda. Attendees had an opportunity to view a slideshow with photos of Gey and to share more memories about the iconic professor.

To read a full article about Professor Gey's contributions and struggles (as published in the spring 2007 issue of this magazine), visit http://www.law.fsu.edu/events/gey_magazine_article.html.

A memorial service honoring the life and career of Steven G. Gey was held Sunday, September 18, 2011, at the law school. Gey, a longtime faculty member and friend of the law school, lost his battle with ALS on June 9, 2011.

Tallahassee Attorney Phil Blank Gives to Law School

Phil Blank

Tallahassee attorney F. Philip Blank, a 1974 graduate of the Florida State University College of Law, has made an additional $250,000 pledge to the law school. Eighty percent of the gift will be used to bolster the existing Alumni Centennial Chair and 20 percent will be expended annually to fund the Blank-Miller Scholarship, which supports students who have financial need. In recognition of the gift, the main conference room in the law school's new Advocacy Center will be named the Phil and Rita Blank Conference Room.

"Florida State gave me a chance and provided me the opportunity to be a lawyer," said Blank, who also is a member of the law school's Board of Visitors. "I am very thankful to the law school for putting me in the position to be able to give back."

"Everyone at the law school is extremely grateful for this generous gift," said Dean Don Weidner. "This is but the latest in a series of gifts by Phil and his wife, Rita, to the law school. They have previously donated scholarships to support our students in financial need and for our students who are direct descendants of Holocaust survivors. Phil also made an earlier gift of $50,000 to the Alumni Centennial Chair. In addition, Phil gives generously of his time to meet with our students."

Blank is the founding shareholder of Blank & Meenan, P.A. in Tallahassee, Florida. He focuses his practice on health care, administrative law, lobbying and litigation.

Weidner Named a Transformative Law Dean

Donald J. Weidner

Florida State University College of Law Dean Donald J. Weidner is one of the last decade's nine transformative law school deans, according to influential legal blogger and University of Chicago Law School Professor Brian Leiter. The criterion for inclusion on Leiter's list is changing an institution, especially its intellectual identity and scholarly profile.

Leiter states that Weidner "has been a successful fundraiser and skilled navigator of Florida's choppy political waters, at the same time presiding over some of the best faculty hiring by any regional law school in the country, as reflected in periodic raids of FSU by top 10 law schools. Yet even with occasional losses, Dean Weidner has sustained the scholarly momentum of the law school."

"I am delighted that the intellectual strength and productivity of our faculty have again been recognized as both nationally significant and durable," said Weidner.

The eight other deans deemed transformative by Leiter are: Michael Fitts (University of Pennsylvania), Heidi Hurd (University of Illinois), Elena Kagan (Harvard University), Kenneth Randall (University of Alabama), Daniel Rodriguez (University of San Diego), Kent Syverud (Vanderbilt University), David Van Zandt (Northwestern University) and Patricia White (Arizona State University).

Judge Jose Martinez Visits Law School

The Honorable Jose Martinez of the United States District Court, Southern District of Florida, was a jurist-in-residence at the College of Law on November 2. He also guest lectured in Professor Wayne Logan's Capital Punishment Seminar, where he gave insight into his ruling in Evans v. McNeil, a recent landmark case that has implications for future capital cases. Judge Martinez ruled in Evans that Florida's capital sentencing statute violates the requirements the U.S. Supreme Court set out in Ring v. Arizona in 2002. He also met with faculty members and talked to students about opportunities for them within the legal profession.

Ray Named to First District Court of Appeal

Stephanie Williams Ray ('95) was appointed by Gov. Rick Scott to the First District Court of Appeal in June. She had been chair of the Florida Public Employees

Relations Commission (PERC) since 2008. Prior to her appointment to PERC, she was assistant dean for development at the College of Law. Her long tenure at the law school includes having served as director of the Placement office from 1999 to 2000 and as assistant/associate dean for administration from 2000-2008.

Advocacy Center Construction Nearing

Rendering of the first-floor courtroom with a 7-seat jury box and adjoining jury room

Members of the law school staff and administration travel across Martin Luther King, Jr. Boulevard several times per week to follow the progress of construction at the college's new Advocacy Center. The law school took over the building, formerly the Florida First District Court of Appeal, in November 2010 and immediately began renovation to transform it from a one-courtroom judicial facility into the finest advocacy training center in the country.

The new Advocacy Center will feature five courtrooms – the historic appellate courtroom and four new courtrooms with jury boxes. One of the new courtrooms also includes an adjoining jury room. In addition, the Advocacy Center will include:

- a suite of offices for our Public Interest Law Center and its three clinics,
- a suite of faculty offices for our top-rated Environmental Law Program,
- a suite of faculty offices for our burgeoning Business Law Program,
- offices and dedicated interview rooms for the Placement Office, and
- additional classrooms – including a video-conference room – and study spaces.

The Advocacy Center is scheduled to be ready for occupancy before the spring semester begins. When students return to classes on January 9, the law school will encompass two city blocks and an additional 50,000 square feet.

Martin Luther King, Jr. Boulevard was closed for several weeks for crews to install traffic-slowing devices to better accommodate the increased student pedestrian traffic.

For more information about naming opportunities, contact Dean Donald J. Weidner at dweidner@law.fsu.edu or 850.644.3071 or Associate Dean for Development Mark Pankey at mpankey@law.fsu.edu, 850.644.5160 or 850.294.1193.

Naming Opportunities

The law school welcomes the opportunity to acknowledge gifts for any purpose by naming rooms in the new Advocacy Center. Because the building is fully funded, donations need not be used for bricks and mortar, but can be directed as the donor wishes. For example, a gift of $250,000 can be earmarked to endow a professorship and be recognized with a named classroom.

BOOK AWARD SPONSORS

2010-2011 Donor Recognition

Gifts to the Florida State University College of Law provide critical support for students, faculty and academic programs. This Annual Report gratefully acknowledges all gifts received between July 1, 2010 and June 30, 2011. Gifts received between July 1, 2011 and June 30, 2012 will be recognized in the fall 2012 issue of Florida State Law.

We hope that our progress over the years has shown that we are putting your contributed dollars to good use. Thank you so much!

We strive to produce a complete and accurate report. Please call any errors or omissions to the attention of:

Dean's Annual Fundraising Report

DEAR ALUMNI AND FRIENDS:

This was a year of great success for the law school. The reputation of our outstanding students, faculty and alumni continues to blossom. The highlight of recent external recognition was when U.S. News & World Report rated our law school among the nation's Top 50 law schools.

Private fundraising made a critical difference at the law school, helping us to attract and to retain the best students and faculty. Our Annual Fund has been an unprecedented success, and our new major gifts are already making a difference.

ANNUAL GIVING FROM STUDENTS AND ALUMNI

This past year, 75.78% of our students contributed to our Annual Fund. Our student enthusiasm and generosity bodes well for the future. They are blazing the trail for us all!

An all-time high of 27.96% of our alumni made cash gifts to the law school! Based on current American Bar Association data, this level of participation should keep us within the nation's top 10 law schools in terms of alumni giving rate. This level of alumni support sends a powerful signal about the enthusiasm our alumni have for the school.

MAJOR GIFTS

This past year, we received Major Gifts totaling $834,566 in cash and $1,075,000 in additional pledges, for a grand total of $1,909,566. The "Cash Gifts By Level" portion of this report includes only cash payments made during the fiscal year, even if they were but a portion of a larger gift. Under the heading of "Recent Larger Gifts," we outline the larger gift commitments that we received in the 2010-2011 fiscal year.

We are deeply grateful to everyone who has contributed to our many successes. We shall continue to do our best to pay great dividends on the dollars you have invested in our school.

Sincerely,

ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIPS

Our single greatest need from private giving is endowed scholarships. Our tuition has steadily increased and is likely to continue to do so. To continue to serve our mission of providing access to all, including those from families of modest means, we will need significantly more scholarships. Scholarships are awarded according to the intent of the donor and can be based on merit, need or other factors.

The minimum gift needed to endow a scholarship at the Florida State University College of Law is $25,000.

ENDOWED PROFESSORSHIPS AND CHAIRS

University of Chicago law school professor Brian Leiter rated our faculty 23rd best in the country in terms of per faculty scholarly impact. We would not have this extraordinary faculty without private giving. Professorships and chairs give us the merit money we need to attract and to retain this top faculty. As they get better and better, we need to do more and more.

Endowed professorships and chairs provide salary supplements based on merit. Faculty members are appointed for five-year terms, with renewal contingent on continued scholarly productivity. The appointee bears the name of the donor or the donor's designee.

The minimum gift needed to endow a professorship at the Florida State University College of Law is $200,000. The minimum gift needed to endow a chair at the Florida State University College of Law is $1,000,000.

ENDOWMENTS FOR EXCELLENCE

Endowments for Excellence leave it to the discretion of the school how to spend income earned on endowment.

The minimum gift needed to create an Endowment for Excellence at the Florida State University College of Law is $25,000.

DONOR RECOGNITION

We are delighted to name scholarships, professorships and other targeted gifts in honor of the donor or the donor's designee. In addition, we are pleased to acknowledge inter vivos gifts of $200,000 or more with an oil portrait of the donor or the donor's designee that will be displayed in a prominent place at the law school.

The new Advocacy Center, which is scheduled to come online by December 2011, gives us a series of supplemental donor recognition possibilities for gifts ranging from $25,000 to $5 million. See the separate Advocacy Center article in this magazine.

For more information, please contact either Dean Don Weidner at 850.644.3071 or dweidner@law.fsu.edu or Mark Pankey, Associate Dean for Development, at 850.644.5160 or mpankey@law.fsu.edu.

Recent Larger Gifts

We would like to specially thank those of you who made a larger gift commitment between July 1, 2010 and June 30, 2011. These gifts make it possible to continue the dynamic advance of the academic programs and reputation of the law school.

$600,000 OR MORE

Ocala attorney Garry D. Adel ('82) has made a $600,000 testamentary gift that will create the Garry D. Adel Endowed Scholarship. The annual distribution from the endowment will be used to award at least one full scholarship each year to recruit a top student to the law school. Any remaining funds distributed by the endowment shall be used to award additional scholarships to recruit top students to the law school. Gary specializes in civil and criminal trial work and is a partner with Blanchard, Merriam, Adel & Kirkland, P.A.

$100,000 TO $599,999

Under the direction of the Attorney General for the state of Florida, the law school has received a directed settlement of $200,000 to supplement the existing Richard W. Ervin Eminent Scholar Chair. The income from the Chair provides funding for a visiting professor who also serves as the Solicitor General in the Office of the Attorney General.

Through a charitable gift annuity, Yvonne T. Brown and her husband The Honorable Stephen T. Brown have agreed to give $100,000 to the law school to create the Yvonne and Steve Brown Public Interest Service Award. The annual income from the endowment will be used to make at least one award each year to a student for his or her work in public interest law. Yvonne is retired from Colliers Aboud Wood-Fay Real Estate Group in Coral Gables, and Judge Brown is the Chief United States Magistrate Judge, 11th Circuit, Southern District of Florida.

Tallahassee attorney Sean Pittman ('94) has made a commitment of $100,000 over time to endow the Sean Pittman Scholarship. The annual distribution from the endowment shall be used to award at least one scholarship each year to a student who also will be provided the opportunity to intern with the Florida Conference of Black State Legislators as a law clerk and policy advisor. The Sean Pittman Scholar must also be interested in pursuing a career in public service. Sean founded the Pittman Law Group, P.L., a corporate law and governmental consulting firm with offices in Tallahassee and Riviera Beach, Florida.

Professor Emeritus Charles W. Ehrhardt has made an additional gift of $75,000 to bring his total gift to the Ehrhardt Endowment for Excellence to $100,000. The income distributed from the endowment will be used at the discretion of the law school to enhance excellence. Chuck retired from full-time teaching in 2007 after 40 years of service. He continues to teach Evidence at least once a year at the law school.

Richard D. Dixon ('74) has made a gift of $50,020 to establish the Richard Dixon Family Endowed Scholarship. The annual distribution from the endowment will be used to award at least one scholarship each year to a law student enrolled in the joint-degree program in Law and Business (J.D./M.B.A.). If no students are enrolled in that program in a particular year, then the scholarship shall be awarded to a law student who has demonstrated a special interest in or commitment to intellectual property law. Rich is retired from Ford Motor Company and lives in Melbourne, Florida.

Mark S. Ellis ('84) has made a specific bequest in his will of $50,000 to create an endowment to be named the Dr. Mark S. Ellis Scholarship. The annual distribution from the endowment shall be used to award at least one scholarship each year to a law school student who is studying or interning in a developing country. Mark is the executive director of the International Bar Association in London, England.

RECENT LARGER GIFTS

Thomas ('75) and Robin Gonzalez have pledged to give an additional $50,000 to bring their total gift to endowment to the Tom and Robin Gonzalez Scholarship to $150,000. The annual distribution from the endowment will provide scholarships for law school students. Tom is a partner in the Tampa firm of Thompson, Sizemore, Gonzalez & Hearing and practices labor and employment law.

Tampa attorney John "Jed" Thomas ('96) has pledged $50,000 to create the John W. and Judith C. Thomas Endowment for Excellence in honor of his parents. The annual distribution from the endowment shall be used at the discretion of the law school for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars and funding for co-curricular activities such as Law Review, Mock Trial and Moot Court. Jed is a partner with Marshall Thomas Burnett and practices sinkhole litigation.

William W. Montjoy ('75), who is president of Global Education and Tuition, has agreed to endow the Montjoy Diversity Enhancement Scholarship by pledging $45,000 over time. The income from this endowment shall be used to provide scholarship support to College of Law students who are from groups that are historically under-represented in the legal profession. Global Education and Tuition sells prepaid tuition plans to families in Latin America.

Robert ('70) and Cynthia Trescott have made specific bequests in their wills of $35,000 to be used at the law school's discretion. Bob is a partner in Trescott & Drucker, P.L. in Coral Gables. His firm focuses on tax and estate planning strategies and estate and trust administration.

F. Philip Blank ('74) and his wife, Rita, have made an additional outright gift of $26,500 to the law school. From this gift, $10,000 will be used to support the Alumni Centennial Chair in honor of Dean Don Weidner, and $15,500 will be used to fund the Blank-Miller Scholarship. Phil is the founding shareholder in the Tallahassee firm of Blank & Meenan, P.A. and focuses his practice on health care, administrative law, lobbying and litigation.

Orlando alumnus Joseph R. Flood ('82) and his wife, Paula, have agreed to give an additional $25,000 to supplement the existing Joe and Paula Flood Oxford Studies Scholarship endowment. The income from this endowment shall be used to award at least one scholarship each year to a student who is of modest means to study abroad with the law school's Summer Program in Law at the University of Oxford in England. Joe is a partner with Dean, Ringers, Morgan & Lawton, P.A. Joe specializes in civil rights law, governmental liability, products liability and has lectured in the area of governmental civil rights, state tort liability and insurance bad faith.

Julio C. Martinez, Jr. ('86) and his wife, Rene, have pledged to give an additional $25,000 over time to bring their total gift to the Julio and Rene Martinez Diversity Enhancement Scholarship endowment to $50,000. The annual distribution from the endowment shall be used to attract students to the law school who are from groups that are historically under-represented in the legal profession, especially Hispanic students, and who have financial need. Julio is a partner in the Kissimmee office of Martinez Manglardi, P.A., which is a statewide litigation firm. Julio handles a wide variety of cases including motor vehicle collisions, wrongful death, workers' compensation, product liability and insurance contract disputes.

Tallahassee couple Cari Roth ('83) and Wellington Meffert ('88) have agreed to establish the Cari Roth and Wellington Meffert Endowment for Excellence by pledging $25,000 over time. The income from the endowment shall be used at the discretion of the law school for any academic purpose including student scholarships, faculty incentives and funding for co-curricular activities such as the Journal of Land Use and Environmental Law, Mock Trial and Moot Court. Cari is a partner in the Tallahassee office of Bryant Miller Olive, where she chairs the firm's Land Use and Governmental Consulting practices. Wellington is general counsel for the Florida Housing Finance Corporation, which helps Floridians obtain affordable housing.

Nancy Mason Wallace ('95) has agreed to endow the Nancy Wallace Endowed Scholarship for Summer Program Alumni by pledging $25,000 over time. The income from this endowment will be used to award at least one scholarship each year to recruit a graduate of the law school's Summer for Undergraduates Program. Nancy is a partner in the Tallahassee office of Akerman Senterfitt, where she is part of the Appellate, Real Estate and Healthcare practices.

In Memoriam

MILTON ALVIN GALBRAITH, JR. ('72) died on May 31, 2011. He was a City of St. Petersburg attorney and a veteran of the U.S. Army.

JUSTIN HOWARD, who would have graduated in the spring of 2011, passed away unexpectedly March 23, 2011. His degree was conferred posthumously.

RHODA K. JOHNSON ('05) died June 12, 2011, in Tallahassee. She was a senior attorney for the state of Florida.

EDWIN "THOM" RUMBERGER, a former member of the Florida State University College of Law Board of Visitors, passed away September 7, 2011, in Tallahassee. He was long-time attorney, Republican advocate and champion of the Everglades and a founding partner in the firm of Rumberger, Kirk & Caldwell.

DOUGLAS L. STOWELL ('69), president of the charter class of Florida State University College of Law, died June 19, 2011. After holding several positions in Florida government, he opened a law firm with offices in Tallahassee and Destin. During 30 years in private practice, he represented the Florida Funeral Directors and wrote the Pre-Need Law that became the standard for most of the nation. He also represented the Northwest Florida Water Management District.

had to his three kids. He and his wife, Andrise, married while Lapointe was in law school and had their first child, 11-year-old Eric, shortly after Lapointe graduated. Together with 8-year-old Alan and 4-year-old Nia, they live in Miramar.

In an effort to keep family ties strong, the Lapointes spend weekends visiting extended family whenever possible. Lapointe also coaches little league soccer every other season.

"My kids play and I get more excited than they do," said Lapointe. "I played in Haiti. It's a poor man's sport – all you need is a ball and rocks for your goal posts. Nia is showing more enthusiasm, though."

Lapointe also aspires to make a difference in the lives of other people's children. One of his many community service activities is volunteering at the Miami-Dade Juvenile Detention Center through Legal Up! – an organization that provides civic and life skills education to underprivileged juveniles and young adults in Miami-Dade County. Lapointe talks to the young people about moving their lives in the right direction and about dealing with law enforcement.

"I want to be a resource for the community," said Lapointe. "It's hard to be a practicing, productive lawyer and also be engaged with the community because each time you engage in something non-business, there is a cost. My goal is to get to a point where I'm able to do that in a seamless way." ■ family makes her a more passionate advocate for her clients. "As a lawyer, there are awesome responsibilities and obligations because you've got other people's lives in your hands. Lawyers have a lot of clients, but you must not forget how important you are to each client – they are sitting at home wondering about their case. They are talking to their neighbors and family members about what their lawyer is doing in their case. That is the topic of their conversation when they are in litigation, especially with family law.

"You have to continue to trudge on in your work life, and devote quality time to yourself and family. There are 24 hours in each day — eight for sleep, eight for work, and eight for yourself and family. That's the goal — that's balance. If you just manage your time and your life, it'll all work out just fine. But, never forget your importance to your kids or your clients." ■

Law School Adds New Faculty Members

Six new tenure-track faculty members have joined the faculty of the College of Law this academic year.

University Professor Steve Johnson is a recognized national scholar on tax litigation and procedure, including legislative and administrative law topics in tax. He joined the law school from University of Nevada, Las Vegas Boyd School of Law, where he was a founding faculty member and the 2008 Outstanding Faculty Member. Prior to entering law teaching, Johnson practiced tax law at Willkie Farr & Gallagher in New York City, after which he served as a senior attorney with the IRS Chief Counsel's Office and a special assistant United States attorney in Jacksonville. He also has taught at Indiana University School of Law and visited at Chicago-Kent College of Law and University of California Hastings College of Law. He earned his J.D. from New York University School of Law and teaches Income Taxation, Partnership Taxation and Administrative Law.

Larson Professor Jeffrey Kahn focuses his scholarship on the federal tax area. He teaches primarily in the area of federal taxation, including personal income tax, corporate tax, partnership tax and international tax courses. He also has taught a seminar on tax policy. After graduating from the University of Michigan Law School, Kahn worked for three years as a tax associate in the Chicago office of McDermott, Will & Emery. He has served on the faculties of Washington & Lee School of Law, Pennsylvania State University Dickinson School of Law and Santa Clara University School of Law. He has also been a visiting professor at Vanderbilt University Law School, Stanford Law School, University of California Hastings College of Law and University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill School of Law.

Jay Kesten, an assistant professor, received his LL.B. from the University of British Columbia in 2002 and an LL.M. from Harvard Law in 2009. After graduating from law school, he clerked for the British Columbia Supreme Court. He also practiced for several years in Boston, most recently at Cooley Godward Kronish LLP, where he focused primarily on corporate and securities litigation. Professor Kesten has been a visiting assistant professor at the Wake Forest University School of Law, and also has guest lectured at Wake Forest's School of Business. His research concentrates on theoretical and empirical aspects of corporate governance. He teaches Corporate Finance, Corporations and Corporate Governance.

After graduating first in his class from Northwestern University School of Law in 2007, Assistant Professor Mark Spottswood clerked for both the Honorable Jeffrey S. Sutton, United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit, and the Honorable Rebecca R. Pallmeyer, United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois.

He is an emerging civil procedure and evidence scholar who focuses his research on the design of fact-finding environments, investigating how we can make legal and private dispute resolution processes more accurate, more acceptable and more cost-effective. He teaches Evidence and Federal Jurisdiction, as well as a first-year required course on Legislation and Regulation.

Assistant Professor Hannah Wiseman will join the faculty in January. Her research explores the role of regulation in protecting the character of living spaces and environmental quality, from the sublocal to the national level. After graduating from Yale Law School in 2007, Wiseman clerked for the Honorable Patrick E. Higginbotham of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. She currently teaches at the University of Tulsa College of Law and is a fellow at the National Energy Policy Institute. She has taught a short course at Lewis and Clark Law School and has been a visiting professor at the University of Texas School of Law. She will teach Energy Law, Environmental Law and Land Use Regulation.

Assistant Professor Samuel R. Wiseman also will join the faculty in January from the University of Tulsa College of Law. His research focuses on pre- and post-trial issues in criminal procedure, including the use of DNA evidence, post-conviction litigation, and the Eighth Amendment’s prohibition against excessive bail. After graduating from Yale Law School in 2007, he served as a law clerk to Chief Justice Wallace B. Jefferson of the Supreme Court of Texas and to Judge Fortunato P. Benavides of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. Between 2009 and 2010, he served as a fellow in the Texas Solicitor General’s Office, focusing on post-conviction litigation before the Fifth Circuit. He will teach Constitutional Law II, Criminal Law and Criminal Procedure: Police.

Faculty Articles Recognized For Excellence

Robin Kundis Craig

Joseph Dodge

Mark Seidenfeld

Three Florida State Law faculty members — Robin Kundis Craig, Joseph Dodge and Mark Seidenfeld — have garnered national praise for their scholarship.

Craig’s article, “Stationarity is dead’ — long live transformation: Five principles for climate change adaptation law,” was ranked one of the top 10 environmental law articles of 2010 by the Land Use and Environmental Law Review. The article was originally published in the Harvard Environmental Law Review.

An article Dodge published in 2010 in the Virginia Tax Review was featured in Jotwell, a resource discussing the best new legal scholarship. No more than 10 articles each year about trusts and estates or tax are selected by Jotwell for review. Wendy Gerzog of the University of Baltimore School of Law wrote that Dodge “exhaustively covers this central question left unanswered by the Supreme Court in its 1984 Dickman decision” in “Revisiting Dickman: Are Loans of Tangible Property Gifts?”

Jotwell also featured a critique of Seidenfeld’s forthcoming Texas Law Review article, “Substituting Substantive for Procedural Review of Guidance Documents.” David L. Franklin of DePaul College of Law writes that Seidenfeld “seems ... to come the closest to hitting the mark” regarding policing “the line between those rules requiring notice and comment and those that do not.”

Professor's Report has International Impact

David Landau

Assistant Professor David Landau, in collaboration with two colleagues from Harvard University and an attorney in Honduras, compiled a report for the Commission on Truth and Reconciliation of Honduras. The group was asked to compile the report by the commission once a new president was elected and installed in the volatile country in 2009.

Landau and his colleagues focused on the constitutional issues surrounding the ouster of former President Manuel Zelaya Rosales, the actions leading up to his removal, and the court's lack of ability to act as impartial arbiters throughout the process. They went to Tegucigalpa, Honduras, in January to conduct interviews and returned to Antigua Guatemala, Guatemala, in March to present their report to the commission.

"It was exciting to work on a project that had such important and direct practical implications," Landau said. "The report was a fascinating opportunity to apply constitutional theory to a severe political crisis that affected the lives of millions of people."

Landau — along with Harvard law professor Noah Feldman; Brian Sheppard, a Harvard Doctor of Juridical Science (S.J.D.) candidate and associate professor at Seton Hall University School of Law; and Leonidas Rosa Suazo, an attorney in Honduras — recommended reforms that became part of the commission's final report released in July. They also met with Lisa Kubiske, the U.S. ambassador to Honduras, shortly after she was confirmed by the

"A significant constitutional reform is now likely to occur in the wake of the crisis," Landau said. "We are hopeful that our proposals will have influence during the constitution-drafting process and will help to improve the quality of democracy in Honduras."

Senate, to discuss the implications of the report on U.S. policy and the direction constitutional reforms might take.

"We are hopeful that our reform proposals will play some role in guiding Hondurans toward a more stable democracy and a brighter future," Landau said. "The report highlighted two dangers that have been endemic to Latin American politics: Military intervention in politics and the risk of a strong chief executive aggrandizing power to stay in office."

The report focused on several areas moving forward:

- 1) Clarifying the text of the constitution so institutional roles are clearer during a crisis;
- 2) Improving the quality of the justice system so that the courts and not the military arbitrate crises and ensure human rights are protected; and

3) Protecting processes of the constitutional reform from abuses by overreaching chief executives.

"A significant constitutional reform is now likely to occur in the wake of the crisis," Landau said. "We are hopeful that our proposals will have influence during the constitution-drafting process and will help to improve the quality of democracy in Honduras."

Record Four Law Students Selected as Gubernatorial Fellows

Nicole Blanton (3L), Judson Searcy (3L), James VanLandingham (2L) and Lorraine Young (3L) are members of the newest class of Florida Gubernatorial Fellows. This is the Gubernatorial Fellows' seventh class since the program's inception and the largest representation Florida State University College of Law has had in any one class. A total of nine Florida State law students have obtained highly competitive Gubernatorial Fellowships during the past three years.

Students who are named Gubernatorial Fellows are matched by the Fellowship director and agency heads for positions and projects that suit their interests and expertise. They work a minimum of 20 hours per week and are paid. To broaden their exposure to state government and enhance their experience, they also meet weekly as a group to participate in educational activities such as presentations, news conferences, budget briefings and policy briefings.

Blanton is working in the Department of Juvenile Justice on identifying, analyzing and recommending the implementation of evidence-based or best practices for juvenile justice reform as supported by scientific studies. She also is working on reducing the unnecessary use of secure detention and residential commitment while ensuring public safety and assisting with legislative initiatives.

"I hope to gain first hand insight into how a state agency runs on a day-to-day basis," Blanton said. "I want to learn how executive branch agencies interact with the Legislature during session and how juvenile justice reforms can positively impact our state, communities and kids."

Searcy is working for the general counsel of the Department of Elder Affairs. He is conducting legal research and drafting various legal documents.

A total of nine Florida State law students have obtained highly competitive Gubernatorial Fellowships during the past three years.

"The elderly are the largest and the most quickly growing population in Florida and one of the most vulnerable," Searcy said. "I hope to gain a better understanding of how the state interacts with the elderly community, and how it serves the plethora of needs that are unique to their group."

At the Department of Economic Opportunity's general counsel's office, VanLandingham is performing legal research and writing on Florida constitutional, statutory and administrative questions. He also is assisting with communications and legislative affairs.

"I am looking forward to learning more about Florida constitutional law and how legal issues affect the management of a large, dynamic and important state agency engaged in the effort to reduce joblessness and put Floridians back to work," VanLandingham said.

Young is working for the general counsel of the Department of Management Services (DMS), providing legal clerking services.

"More than anything, I want to leave the Department of Management Services and this fellowship being equipped with knowledge and confidence necessary to effect change in my own community," Young said.

Young has been featured in a "Fellow Spotlight" on the Gubernatorial Fellows Web site. According to the article, she assists the Office of Supplier Diversity in reaching out to minority businesses, helps the Division of State Group Insurance and Division of Retirement ensure public employees receive accurate, well-earned benefits, and helps DMS create legally sound, cost-efficient procedures for state procurements and acquisitions in the future.

Florida Bar Business Law Section Hosts Meet and Greet

The Business Law Section of The Florida Bar and the Business Law Society of Florida State University College of Law hosted a meet and greet at the law school on October 5. Alan Howard Aronson, a shareholder with Akerman Senterfitt LLP in Miami and a member of the membership committee of the section, led the discussion, during which he and other members of the Business Law Section informed students of the various ways a student can become involved with the section. They also spoke about many benefits that would come from being a student member, such as more networking opportunities and career opportunities. Approximately 90 students attended the session. Jodi Daniel Cooke, an associate at Beggs & Lane in Pensacola, and William B. Wiley ('74), a Tallahassee attorney who lobbies for the section, also attended.

Law School Ranked Third Best in Nation for Hispanic Students

Nancy Benavides

Hispanic Business magazine has named Florida State University College of Law the third best law school in the nation for Hispanic students in its September 2011 issue. This is the eighth year in a row that the College of Law has been named one of the top 10 law schools for Hispanic students.

The magazine based its ranking on the following criteria: Hispanic student enrollment, Hispanic faculty members, degrees conferred to Hispanics, progressive programs aimed at increasing enrollment of Hispanic students and school reputation as reflected in U.S. News & World Report.

“Many law schools view Hispanic students as a statistic, a raw number used to send a message, make a statement,” said Manuel Utset, the law school’s Charles W. Ehrhardt Professor and a Cuban-American, raised in Miami. “What is unique about the College of Law is that everyone, from the administration on down, treats each and every student as individuals. If you are Hispanic, you are embraced as part of the College of Law family, because of who YOU are — a student, who is Hispanic, and who is special many other ways. I cannot think of a better way to create a truly diverse law school.”

“We are all thrilled to be named the nation’s number three law school for Hispanic students,” said Associate Dean for Student Affairs Nancy Benavides. “It is our mission every day to make sure all of our students feel welcomed, supported and have everything they need to succeed in law school and beyond.”

STUDENT ACHIEVEMENTS

Jonathan Baker (3L) won this year's Young Lawyers Division of The Florida Bar and Florida Lawyers Mutual Insurance Company's essay contest for Florida law students. As a result, Baker's article, "Flying in the Clouds: Practicing Law by Cloud Computing," was published in the November issue of the Florida Bar Journal.

Amanda Blair was named to the 2012-2013 board of directors for the National Association of Graduate-Professional Students as the Southeastern Regional Chair.

Nicole Blanton (3L) is an American Bar Association Law Student Division liaison for the State and Local Government Law Section of the ABA.

Molly Drake (3L) will clerk for Chief Judge Shraon L. Blackburn of the Northern District of Alabama in 2012-13. She already had secured a clerkship with Judge William Pryor of the Eleventh Circuit for 2013-14.

Samuel Farkas (3L) was a summer associate with Henderson, Franklin, Starnes & Holt, P.A. in 2011.

Amanda Gibson (3L) was a summer law clerk at GrayRobinson, P.A. in Melbourne. She was among only 12 summer associates in the firm's 2011 Summer Law Clerk program.

Alex Haddad (3L), the Student Bar Association president, was named to the 2011 Florida State University Homecoming Court.

Daniela Hogue (3L) received a Florida Bar Foundation Summer Fellowship. She was the Rebecca Knox Summer Fellow at Coast-to-Coast Legal Aid.

Sarah Huff (3L) was a summer law clerk at GrayRobinson, P.A. in Orlando. She was among only 12 summer associates in the firm's 2011 Summer Law Clerk program.

Logan McEwan (3L) received an Academy of Interactive Arts & Sciences Mark Beaumont Scholarship totaling $2,500 to help pursue his career in interactive entertainment.

G.C. Murray (3L) was appointed chief justice by the Student Government Association president of Florida State University. The position is the highest ranking member of the judicial branch and the Student Supreme Court. The appointee must go through an interview process with both the Student Bar Association and SGA president. He or she is then screened by the Judiciary Committee of the SGA before being brought before the SGA Senators for confirmation. The chief justice appoints the general counsel, university defender, clerk of court and election commission. He also authors opinions on cases brought before the court, offers advisory opinions and more. Murray was also named to the 2012-2013 board of directors for the National Association of Graduate-Professional Students as the national director of social justice.

Tara Klimek Price (3L) will clerk for The Honorable Robert Hinkle of the United States District Court Northern District of Florida after she graduates in 2012.

Lauren Ryan (3L) was elected president of the Law Students Division of The Florida Bar.

Trevor Smith (2L) received a $2,500 scholarship from The Animal Legal Defense Fund. He was one of seven students to receive an Advancement of Animal Law Scholarship. He also spent last summer as a legal intern for the Animal Welfare Institute, tackling federal regulatory issues affecting wildlife and animals in agriculture. He will spend the summer of 2012 as a clerk for the nationally renowned, D.C.-based public interest law firm of Meyer Glitzenstein & Crystal.

Haley Van Erem (2L) received a Florida Bar Foundation Summer Fellowship and was the Terry Russell Summer Fellow, working at Legal Services of North Florida this summer.

Networking Nosh with Secretary Lawson

On October 25, Florida Department of Business and Professional Regulation Secretary Ken Lawson ('91) met with a small group of students for lunch at the law school. The topic of his Networking Nosh session was, “Legal Career as a Federal Government Attorney.” Secretary Lawson was appointed to his current position in March of 2011. With experience that includes having served as an assistant U.S. attorney, as assistant secretary of enforcement for the U.S. Department of the Treasury and as assistant chief counsel for field operations with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security’s Transportation Security Administration, he shared insight on being a federal government attorney.

Bacchus Visits the Law School

James L. Bacchus ('79) spoke about “America’s Leadership in a Globalized World” at the law school on November 14. He is a chair of the Global Practice Group at Greenberg-Traurig, LLP in Washington, D.C., and has served the country in a variety of ways throughout his career. Previously a widely praised member of the United States House of Representatives who accomplished many bi-partisan legislative efforts, he then became a founding member of the Appellate Body of the World Trade Organization.

He served two eight-year terms, twice serving as chairman.

Bacchus opened his lunchtime talk to about 100 students by offering his impressions of America as other countries see this nation. After a lifetime of traveling the globe, he is more uniquely qualified than many to express these thoughts. Over the course of the previous five weeks alone, he had been on four continents and in half a dozen countries. He described the divisive nature of politics in Washington currently and reiterated that we are “one nation, one world — we cannot escape that.” Bacchus also reminded students that this country was founded on compromises, including the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

“As a judge on the international court, I’ve decided more cases than anyone else on the planet ... not one of those decisions was unanimous,” Bacchus said. “This political paralysis is holding us back.”

Bacchus also spoke to students in Professor Fred Abbott’s International Trade Law course immediately after the luncheon.

Mock Trial Team Wins FJA Competition Again

For a second year in a row, the Florida State University College of Law Mock Trial Team won first place in the E. Earle Zehmer Memorial Mock Trial Competition. The 2011 competition, hosted by the Florida Justice Association Young Lawyers Section, was held in Tampa on November 5-6.

Winning team members are third-year students Raul Arispe, of Los Angeles, California, and Marshawn Griffin, of Pensacola, Florida, and second-year students Joey Chindamo, of Longwood, Florida, and Jennito Simon, of Pompano Beach, Florida. They were coached by Tallahassee attorneys Dana Brooks ('07), who is a shareholder at Eubanks, Barrett, Fasig & Brooks, and Matt Liebenhaut ('05), who practices at the Law Office of Matt Liebenhaut.

"We are all so proud of our Mock Trial Team for winning this important statewide competition for a second year in a row," said Dean Don Weidner. "Special thanks go to the student competitors and to their coaches."

Other law schools competing in the event were University of Miami, Stetson University, Florida Coastal School of Law, Florida International University and Nova Southeastern University. Each school sent two teams to the competition.

Dr. Mark S. Ellis ('84), executive director of the International Bar Association in London, spoke at a luncheon meeting of the International Law Students Association (ILSA) on October 11. He encouraged the approximately 70 students who attended in their interest in international law and said the areas of law that intersect with international law are almost limitless. Ellis engaged students by discussing a recent legal and ethical question the International Bar has dealt with.

This semester, Ellis is co-teaching International Human Rights with Professor Sandy D'Alemberte, who was also in attendance at the ILSA meeting.

CLOSING NOTES...

The 2011 entering class has a median LSAT of 162 and a median GPA of 3.47.

Students and faculty at the law and medical schools work together through the Medical-Legal Partnership — a new clinic within the Public Interest Law Center.

Within nine months of graduation, approximately 91% of Class of 2010 graduates were employed, with an additional 2% pursuing further graduate studies.
