What a Fall World Series!

If you build it, they will come. That was the idea behind our new Advocacy Center. It was wonderful inheriting and refurbishing the historic First District Court of Appeal courtroom. That impressive appellate courtroom seemed to be the very least we could do for our own historic Moot Court program, which has been award-winning for decades. Founded under the guidance of Bill VanDercreek and guided so ably for many years now by Nat Stern, the John W. & Ashley E. Frost Professor of Law, the Moot Court Team is a source of pride for every one of us. The special addition, our new “signature,” if you will, and the reason the building merits the name “Advocacy Center,” was four trial court rooms we built custom-made to our specifications. Each is equipped with a jury box and one is also equipped with a jury deliberation room. These court rooms are of course useful for our Moot Court Team, but they are uniquely useful for Mock Trial. With such a facility, how could people not come—come to see us as a law school especially committed to Trial Advocacy as well as Appellate Advocacy.

Trial teams have started to come from around the nation to compete in our Advocacy Center. This year, Ruth Stone, the Wayne and Pat Hogan Professor of Trial Practice and the longstanding Faculty Advisor to the Mock Trial Team, has for the fourth year in a row planned a competition that will draw Mock Trial competitors from law schools across the country to our Advocacy Center to compete over a problem she designed. Our Mock Trial students will once again serve as the proud hosts.

Now our Mock Trial students have taken the game to a whole new level! They have just pulled off the Mock Trial equivalent of two grand-slam home runs! In early October, the Mock Trial Team won first place in the National Trial Advocacy Tournament sponsored by the University of Florida. The competition, which was held October 9-11 in Gainesville, involved a criminal trial. A total of 13 teams participated in the tournament, including a team from UCLA, which we beat in the final round of competition. Other schools competing included Fordham, The University of Alabama, UGA and Richmond. And, our winning competitors were all second-year students! Little more than a week later, a different Mock Trial Team won first place in the National Criminal Trial Advocacy Competition sponsored by the California Attorneys for Criminal Justice and University of California Hastings College of the Law. The competition was held October 15-18 in San Francisco. Once again, the other competitors included some of the nation’s top law schools. In the final round, we beat a team from host school University of California Hastings. We beat a team from Northwestern in the round before that. Other top schools competing included University of California – Berkeley, University of California – Davis, Fordham, and Pepperdine.

This issue includes more details of our wonderful student advocates and their coaches. What the article doesn’t say is that our trial courses supporting our students are stronger than ever, and now include offerings such as Depositions and Jury Selection. Finally, the article doesn’t mention that Joe Bodiford, new to Tallahassee and formerly a Stetson coach, has joined Ruth Stone as Co-Faculty Advisor to the Mock Trial Team. Congratulations to all, with a special thanks to the alumni whose generosity has enabled us to pay to send these wonderful students and their coaches to national competitions.

Last, and by no means least, this issue features stories on some of our terrific alumni leaders as well as a snapshot of some of the young lawyers from other nations who have come to Florida State for an LL.M.

What an honor it is to be a part of this law school—of this wonderful and loving community of students, faculty, staff and alumni! Thank you.

Dean Don Weidner: Friend, Colleague, Innovator, Leader and Cheerleader-in-Chief

By Christi N. Morgan

Weidner's commitment to projecting a law school that the entire community can be proud of has translated into cutting-edge technology throughout the campus and also a newly redesigned website (pictured in the background) that will help attract new students for years to come.

plishments have propelled Florida State to be ranked among the nation's best law schools.

"Don has led the College of Law to remarkable heights in every meaningful way: faculty scholarship and teaching, student body profile, placement of graduates, alumni involvement and contributions, and national standing," said John W. & Ashley E. Frost Professor Nat S. Stern, who considered Weidner his mentor and close friend well before Weidner became dean. "Even the physical facilities have undergone dramatic improvement and expansion under Don. His unflagging dedication and superb leadership have enabled the law school to make those strides."

"Part of Don's greatness as a leader is that he would never take credit for all of these successes," said First District Court of Appeal Judge Stephanie W. Ray ('95), who is an alum and who also worked with Weidner at the law school for many years. "He's masterful at assembling resources, sharpening ideas, and inspiring others. But we all know where the credit lies."

Under his leadership, the law school's annual giving rate has increased by approximately 500 percent – FSU has the nation's 10th best alumni giving rate – and its endowment has grown to more than six times what it was.

"People who only know Don by reputation will think of him as a con-

When Dean Don Weidner steps down as dean in June 2016, it will be the end of a wildly successful era. It is almost impossible to succinctly state everything that he has accomplished since becoming dean in 1991. Recognized in 2011 as one of the most transformative law school deans of the past decade, perhaps Weidner's most obvious accomplishment is leading the Florida State University College of Law into the top tier of American law schools.

"I am, of course, pleased that we've moved into the top tier," said Weidner. "And I was deliriously happy when last year we, for the first time, beat University of Florida in the U.S. News rankings."

Weidner's countless other accomsummata fundraiser, and they’d be right. But they would never guess that he didn’t come to it naturally,” said alum Wayne Hogan (’72), president at Terrell Hogan and Summer for Undergraduates Program benefactor. “He knew partnership law like nobody else, but he didn’t know fundraising. He had to train himself into it. He worked hard at it. And, before we knew it, he was transformed into our version of Bobby Bowden in the family kitchen.”

Utilizing the funds he helped raise, Weidner created a system of merit that brought top scholars to Florida State and has kept them in Tallahassee when higher ranked law schools tried to recruit them.

“Putting merit into the salary determinations for both faculty and staff is really important. At the faculty level, we had two chairs when I started and no endowed professorships,” recalled Weidner. “And we now have 21 endowed professorships and they are awarded purely on the basis of merit. We do it a little bit differently than most schools – we appoint people to professorships for five-year terms with renewal contingent on the recipient’s continued scholarly productivity. Also, we’ve been very aggressive in our counter-offer policy. Thanks to alumni who have endowed the professorships, we’ve been able to retain many of our best faculty against all but the most heavily endowed private and public law schools.”

Stearns Weaver Miller Professor Mary Ziegler appreciates Weidner’s enthusiastic leadership of the faculty. “Don goes out of his way to make me feel supported in both tangible and intangible ways. He has steadfastly supported my research and given me every opportunity to pursue important projects and present my research to national audiences. More than many deans, he deeply values good teaching and exchanges ideas with faculty about how each of us can improve in the classroom. He celebrates faculty achievements and makes each of us feel that he is proud of what we have done. It is hard to imagine a dean making faculty feel more valued.”

“At one point we had a faculty that

Weidner’s favorite memory from his time as dean is when students presented him with a giant, Styrofoam ‘50’ that they signed when Florida State broke into the U.S. News & World Report top 50 law schools.

did not get along with each other very well, but that is no longer the case at all,” said Professor Emeritus Chuck Ehrhardt, who has been on the faculty since before Weidner became an FSU professor in 1976. “The ship is running smoothly. Students and faculty are very happy with his leadership. I think he is going to be a very difficult person to replace.”

Always an innovator, Weidner continually adapted and expanded the school’s academic offerings in response to changes in the legal marketplace.

“The curriculum is much stronger than it’s ever been,” said Weidner. “On the litigation side we have new courses such as Depositions and Jury Selection. And on the business side we have a Business Law Clinic and courses on the Dodd-Frank Act and Game Theory for Business Lawyers. We’re in a position to be institutionally nimble with our new 3+3 programs, expanded LL.M. programs and our new Juris Master program. And we’ve been pushing the cutting-edge, but not the bleeding-edge, of technology by using various distance learning technologies, including asynchronous technologies.”

Weidner embraces technology and in recent years has sought to bring state-of-the-art software and equipment into all of the law school’s classrooms. Earlier in his tenure, Weidner addressed a need for more clinical offerings.

“We now have live-client clinics in addition to externships and the externship program is much more organized and has expanded greatly,” said Ruth Stone, who is the Wayne and Pat Hogan Professor of Trial Practice and leads the Family Law Clinic. “Don seems to understand that you need both theory and practice to turn out good lawyers and he has embraced the clinics. He has always been open to suggestions and ideas that are novel.”

During the last decade, Weidner garnered support for a facilities expansion that resulted in the school’s 50,000-square-foot Advocacy Center. The building includes five courtrooms – four with jury boxes and one with a jury deliberation room. It is part of Weidner’s larger vision to have an immaculate, sophisticated physical plant in which students can prepare for their careers.

“This new Advocacy Center building has taken our physical plant to a whole new level,” said Weidner. “We couldn’t have done it without the alumni who helped us behind the scenes to champion our cause with the Legislature.”

Throughout his tenure as dean, Weidner has fostered a collegial community where students come first. Like a proud father, he is the first to spread the word about a national award or advocacy victory. While most U.S. law deans do not teach regularly, Weidner enjoys interacting with students so much that he has continued to teach a class every year while he has been dean.

Alum Peggy Rolando ('78) took Real Estate Finance and Business Associations from Weidner before he became dean. Now a partner in the Miami office of Shutts & Bowen and a national expert in condominium and real estate finance, Rolando uses daily the concepts she learned in Weidner's classes. More importantly, she has been friends with Weidner since she graduated.

“What I find remarkable about Don is his abiding interest in his students and in the alums,” said Rolando. “He is so good at reaching out and talking to people—finding out what their practices are like, what they're interested in. He has this effortless interest. Not so long after I graduated he would give me a call, maybe once or twice a year, just to touch base and see how I was doing. And this was long before he was dean. He was staying in contact to see what his students were doing and how they were succeeding. He was already building relationships and trying to contribute to the success of his students.”

“When I leave the deanship, I look forward to working more with the students on a substantive level,” said Weidner. “I don't do that enough, but the best three-and-a-half hours I had last year was working with three of the Business Review students, editing an article I wrote for them on capital accounts.”

Weidner's commitment to the student body includes connecting students with alums. This has been a key component of Weidner's mission to prepare students for professional success. He is quick to point out that without such an engaged alumni base, Florida State students would not be as successful as they are.

“We have a wonderful staff in the placement office and wonderfully supportive alumni who bring jobs to Florida State to thank for our job placement rates. Generous alumni have also helped us support student activities, whether it's a co-curricular organization like Law Review or Moot Court, or other organizations such as BLSA or the SBA.”

Weidner counts many Florida State law alums among his closest friends.

He admits he will miss getting to visit with alumni as often after his retirement. When Weidner announced in August that he planned to step down as dean, alums from around the world sent their well wishes. Many graduates have expressed how much they will miss Weidner and how hard it will be to replace him.

“It is going to be a huge loss for the law school,” said alum John W. Frost, II ('69), who is the founding partner of Frost Van den Boom, P.A. and for whom the historic courtroom is named. “I think he has brought the law school such a long way. He's done a tremendous job of elevating the notoriety of the law school and the quality of the students.”

Rolando admits she was disappointed when she heard of Weidner's plan to step down. “I was really sad because he's been so unique. It's very, very unusual for the dean of a law school to be dean for more than a few years. Our law school has had tremendous stability and tremendous growth and tremendous increase in our academic stature, in large part because of Don’s tenure. So I’m sad, but change can be really good, too. He has established a strong base for a new dean to build on.”

Upon retiring as dean, Weidner plans to take a two-semester sabbatical. He will devote more time to consulting and to writing, including pieces like the guest column he wrote for Power & Motoryacht in 2014. Weidner will return to the full-time faculty when his sabbatical ends.

Judge Ray had mixed feelings when she heard that Weidner would be retiring as dean. “Of course, I was immediately disappointed to learn that the law school would be losing Don as its dean. He’s been a transformative leader, who has strengthened the law school immeasurably. But having witnessed firsthand his tireless commitment to the school, I’m happy that he’s at a place where he can step away and return to his love of full-time teaching and scholarship.”

“What I’m looking forward to is being able to sit down in the mornings and drink a cup of coffee with Don and either talk about his boat or the law or politics. We used to do that before he became dean,” said Ehrhardt.

“I’ve definitely improved the coffee service at the law school,” joked Weidner, who is known around the law school for brewing strong coffee. “We probably have more coffee pots here and going than any other law school I can think of.”

The coffee might not be as free-flowing had Florida State’s 1990-91 dean search produced different candidates.

“I really only threw my hat in the ring when we had a dean search and I was not very impressed with the outside candidates for dean,” said Weidner.

Despite the law school’s many rankings and accolades during his deanship, Weidner is most proud of the collegial team he has assembled at the College of Law. He cherishes the accomplishments of his colleagues.

“I enjoy other people’s successes – whether it’s faculty, staff or students – I really enjoy seeing people blossom. I enjoy seeing faculty and staff promoted. I enjoy seeing students get jobs. I enjoy seeing the good in people. I feel the same about alumni – visiting alumni in their offices and seeing them for lunch. I enjoy their successes.”

As many good leaders do, Weidner gives credit to faculty and staff members for the law school’s achievements.

“As dean, you don’t really accomplish things by yourself,” said Weidner. “You can only accomplish with and through others. So much of it is assembling great teams of people – particularly helping to assemble a great and very productive faculty and a great professional staff. I think the faculty today is much stronger than it was when I started as dean and the staff is also much stronger than it was. In both cases, a large part of the effort in getting us from here to there is rewarding merit.”

Frost believes Weidner’s team-building ability is extraordinary. “Because of the way he communicates with everybody, I think he is a tremendous builder of teams – getting the alumni to interact with the students and getting the alumni to care about the law school even though they are out and doing other things. He is a great moti-vator for getting team spirit. He makes everybody feel like they are still part of the law school.”

“He’s the best boss I’ve ever had,” said Stone. “He’s perceptive. If you have an issue, he immediately seems to understand it. He is empathetic and he tries to help find the best resolution to whatever the issue is. I also think he lets people do their jobs. If he knows that you are doing a good job, he is not going to interfere. I also think he’s a very kind person.”

Weidner’s aim has been to create an uplifting environment for his team. “I hope I’ve added a culture of decency. I hope that when people have difficult family issues, they find the law school is at least accommodating and perhaps even highly supportive and encouraging. I hope it is a family-friendly place where people feel good about the jobs they are doing and are proud to work here and students are proud to be here.”

In addition, Weidner has created a law school that is institutionally nimble, with new courses, programs and delivery systems. He also created a law school where everyone is committed to innovation and success.

“I’ll miss being the law school’s cheerleader-in-chief, but I’m proud to leave the dean’s office knowing that the school is going to get along just fine without me,” remarked Weidner, who looks forward to having more discretionary time and to being able to visit his son in London and daughter in Nashville more often. “It’s like being a parent when you see your kids out the door – you know they don’t need you anymore, but hope they keep you close to their hearts.” ■

Kimberly Holladay Knows Business from the Inside-Out

Five-year-old Kimberly Holladay was going to be a veterinarian. That was her heart's desire and she carried it with her into early adulthood. It was not until her second year of studies at the University of West Florida that Holladay reluctantly let go of her childhood plan.

"We had to watch surgery and I realized very quickly that I don't do well with blood," recalled Holladay. "My professor said, 'Maybe you want to go outside, Kim,' and I was sitting in the hallway with my head between my legs, not sure what was happening or why it was getting really hot and I was seeing stars."

Holladay fortuitously switched her major to Legal Administration. Although she initially thought she would become a paralegal, that switch ultimately set her on the path to her true calling: practicing law.

Since graduating from the College of Law in December 1992, Holladay has primarily practiced transactional law. Holladay spent several years getting experience at firms in Tampa and Atlanta, before she was ready to move in-house in 2000.

"I knew I eventually wanted to go in-house and I knew Atlanta would give me more opportunities for that," said Holladay. "I enjoy doing deals, but you never really got to know the business. I decided I wanted to be part of a company, it was appealing to me. I wanted to understand a how a business operated and how I could fit into that and help the company prosper.”

Holladay has been with the same company, in various iterations, since is what I like about it,” said Holladay. She also likes collaborating with the business people and the Veritiv legal team, which consists of eight lawyers and three paralegals.

Holladay also enjoys the city in

“I enjoy doing deals, but you never really got to know the business. I decided I wanted to be part of a company, it was appealing to me. I wanted to understand a how a business operated and how I could fit into that and help the company prosper.”

she left private practice. Through a July 2014 merger, she became Senior Counsel–Corporate for Veritiv Corporation, a leading business-to-business distributor of print, publishing, packaging, facility and logistics solutions.

“Our company is only a year old, so there have been so many firsts and so many new things that I have worked on in the past year,” said Holladay, who was at the New York Stock Exchange when Veritiv went public in July 2014. “I worked very heavily on the due diligence for the merger and I was also selected to be on the integration team to work with our consultant and folks from the other company to manage the integration for the two companies prior to closing. It was a great experience. I had never worked on a deal of this size.”

Many of Holladay’s responsibilities still center around transactional law — she provides legal support for real estate, the logistics solutions business unit as well as various corporate matters, including public filings and certain international matters.

“My work has great variety, which which she works and lives. She is constantly sampling Atlanta’s cultural offerings — including its theater productions and concerts. Holladay also is a member of an Atlanta women’s tennis team.

“I picked up tennis when I moved here and I have really loved it,” said Holladay. “I’m a member of the Atlanta Lawn Tennis Association (ALTA) and have been with the same women’s team for 10 years. Tennis has provided me with the opportunity to meet great friends whom I never would have met in my normal day-to-day of being a lawyer. It’s great to get outside after you’re in the office all day long.”

Spending time outdoors — especially with her golden retriever Phyllis — is important to the Pensacola, Florida native. She misses being near the beach, but loves Atlanta’s mild change of seasons. Being outdoors is also important to Holladay when she travels.

“Over the past couple years I have been focusing on getting outdoors for an active vacation to get some fresh air and exercise — I wanted to be tired from physical activity instead of thinking,” said Holladay, who counts studying abroad in Barbados during law school as one of her favorite travel experiences. “I also participated in a beginner surf camp in Costa Rica and have lately been enjoying some of the U.S. national parks — last year was Zion and this Labor Day was Acadia.”

One recent trip that Holladay especially treasures was one she took to Boston with her younger brother, sister-in-law and 13-year-old nephew, Cody. “It was their first visit and it was amazing. My brother said it was his best vacation ever; it was a proud moment for me.”

Holladay has a very special bond with her nephew. During the summers, Cody stays with his aunt in Atlanta for two weeks. “It’s a great job, this aunt thing,” joked Holladay. “This relationship has also been great for my relationship with my brother — we’ve become even closer now that we have that to share.”

Her family is extremely important to Holladay. Family is one reason why she stayed in Pensacola and attended UWF and it is also the primary reason why she chose FSU for law school — to be relatively close to home. She eventually moved farther away, and even though Holladay is busy, she never goes more than a few months without a visit home. ■

prior. He had been serving as interim director of the Foundation for several months while he was still practicing law at King, Blackwell, Zehnder & Wermuth, P.A.

Because his firm was committed to serving the profession, Blackwell has a long history of service to the Orange County Bar Association and to The Florida Bar. When his term on The Florida Bar Board of Governors ended in 1998, he joined The Florida Bar Foundation Board of Directors, serving as president in 2007-2008. In his current leadership role at the Foundation, Blackwell owns the challenging task of helping the organization fund and facilitate a new vision for Florida's legal aid delivery system in a rapidly changing legal marketplace.

"In this new job, I'm able to be involved with a group of people, on our staff, within the Bar as a whole, with the Vision 2016 group, with the leadership of The Florida Bar, and with the Florida Commission on Access to Civil Justice, where, hopefully within the near term, we really can make change – positive change that will help the profession and the public we serve," said Blackwell. "I've been having a ball. I want to believe that I can make some small difference."

Blackwell is proud of the difference the Foundation has been making since its inception in 1956.

After a successful career in complex civil litigation, it would have made sense for Bruce Blackwell to switch his focus from trials to travel when he retired from private practice. Instead, he took the helm of The Florida Bar Foundation.

"It was hard to leave my law firm because I love it and I love the lawyers I worked with – they are brilliant," said Blackwell, who became the Foundation's second only CEO/executive director in 2014 after retiring from the Orlando firm he helped found 30 years

“Since the Foundation came into existence, through the Interest on Trust Accounts from Florida lawyers, more than $450 million has been funneled into representing the most needy people in Florida – the people who would have otherwise been denied services,” said Blackwell. “Regardless of the nature of your practice, you should do pro bono work. If you do it, you’ll actually get more out of it than you’re putting in. You have the opportunity to make a difference in people’s lives. Isn’t that part of why you became a lawyer, because you thought you wanted to help people?”

“The Foundation is the statewide organization that helps make access to justice and to our courts real and we can use your support monetarily, particularly in these times when interest rates are almost zero, but also by contributing to your local legal aid programs. We are working really hard to make significant change in how Florida delivers services and access to the courts, to provide justice.”

Through his own portfolio of pro bono work, Blackwell has been helping Floridians obtain access to the legal system since long before he joined the board of the Foundation. He has earned numerous pro bono-related awards, including the American Bar Association’s Pro Bono Publico Award in 2013.

“Once I became a lawyer, I realized that there were a lot of people that didn’t have access to lawyers and to the system,” said Blackwell. “I really believe that justice works well when it works for everyone, and it doesn’t work at all if it doesn’t work for everyone. That’s why I have handled a number of hard pro bono

Blackwell left an excellent job as an officer in the U.S. Air Force to pursue the law degree that has allowed him to give back. Perhaps Blackwell is drawn to helping those less fortunate than him because he can relate. By age 11, Blackwell had lost both of his parents. He and his brother were then raised by their aunt in a rural town of 400 people. “I grew up very poor, with very limited means,” recalled Blackwell. “The first lawyer I ever met was the one that did our adoption.”

Blackwell credits his aunt with teaching him the value of hard work, which has served him well throughout his career.

When the demands of his job as CEO/Executive Director of the Foundation do not require him to be in Florida, Blackwell sometimes works from his home in Asheville, North Carolina. From his yard, where he is often joined by bears and wild turkeys, he can see 16 mountain tops. He and his wife, Julie McMillan Blackwell, discovered Asheville when Blackwell was an attorney for Southern Bell 40 years ago and traveled to the area.

Blackwell and his wife have been together since before he graduated from the College of Law in December 1974. They met as undergraduates at Florida State University and have been married for more than 46 years.

“I married really well,” said Blackwell. “The key thing for us in raising a family was to raise children that would make a difference and hopefully leave this world a better place. I think we have succeeded with our two children in that regard.”

The Blackwells are understandably proud of their two daughters: Blair Allison Blackwell, who runs Chevron’s national STEM program, and Brooke Blackwell Castino, who is a stay-at-home-mom to 8-year-old Emma Kate and 5-year-old Allison. Because his grand-daughters live five minutes away, Blackwell spends plenty of quality time with them. The girls often have sleepovers with their grandparents and even spent two weeks this summer with their grandmother in North Carolina. Blackwell took Emma Kate to her first FSU football game last fall.

Although Blackwell has numerous professional accolades to speak of – he was named one of Florida’s top 100 lawyers toward the end of his law career – he seems to prefer talking about the many accomplishments of his daughters and about their relationship.

“When Blair did her thesis at Princeton, the front of her thesis said, ‘To my sister Brooke, from whom I’m always learning.’ As a father, it doesn’t get any better. You’ve done something right.” ■

NBA President Benjamin Crump: Seeking Justice Through the Profession and His Practice

To say that Tallahassee attorney Benjamin Crump is busy would be an understatement. When your practice involves high-profile civil rights and personal injury cases all over the country and the national news media contacts you on a regular basis, your schedule is full. Since his installation as president of the National Bar Association (NBA) on July 23, Crump's calendar has only become more chaotic. The day he was interviewed for this article, Crump also had interviews scheduled with national media outlets to talk about the results of an NBA survey to be released that same morning. His phone was buzzing relentlessly, but Crump, as usual, made time for his alma mater.

Crump and his law partner Daryl Parks, who founded Parks & Crump shortly after they graduated from the College of Law in 1995, have been involved with the NBA since before they took their attorney's oaths.

"We went to our first convention even before we became lawyers," said Crump, who has not missed an annual convention since. "We took the bar exam and Daryl was clerking for Willie Gary, who was a huge advocate for the National Bar Association and he would take his whole firm to the convention every year. We went to Willie Gary and told him we wanted to go to the convention, but we had no money. So, he sponsored us going to our first convention in Baltimore, Maryland in 1995, and we were hooked. We met so many amazing people and great lawyers.

"Much of our success as lawyers and knowing what to do in the realistic sense of law – not the theoretical sense – we learned from the National Bar Association and other lawyers, especially black lawyers, around the country."

Crump's installation as the NBA's 73rd president was held during the organization's 90th convention in Los Angeles. It marked the 20th consecutive year in which Crump attended the annual meeting.

The theme of Crump’s presidency is, “One NBA united: to preserve our legacy and protect our future.” It is important to Crump that he addresses the issues and opportunities that impact all segments of the NBA membership. During the year, the NBA will host many important events. In September, the organization participated in its annual lobbying effort with the Congressional Black Caucus in Washington, D.C. The NBA held a panel discussion and press conference with two senators who are proposing legislation for a $500 million allocation to purchase body cameras for law enforcement officers across the United States.

“The National Bar Association was the first to endorse this legislation and to partner with these senators to make sure this important initiative became a reality,” said Crump. “Since the tragedies that we’ve seen play out during the past year with police involvement with minorities in cities all over America, we wanted to try to present solutions rather than just continue to talk about the matters that continue to happen over and over again. We think the preventative measure is these body cameras.” As the lead attorney for the family of Michael Brown, Crump believes much of the turmoil in Ferguson, Missouri could have been avoided had there been video footage of what transpired.

In October, the NBA held the annual Wiley Branton Symposium at North Carolina Central Law School to discuss the Voting Rights Act. “The issue I chose is, 50 years after the Voting Rights Act, how far have we come and how much farther do we have to go to the 2016 presidential election to make every vote count.”

In December, the NBA is partnering with the City of Montgomery and the Tuskegee Human and Civil Rights Multicultural Center to commemorate the 60th anniversary of Rosa Parks refusing to give up her seat on a Montgomery bus. The event will focus on the role lawyers played in the civil rights movement.

Part of what motivates Crump is a desire to improve the reputation of attorneys. “I find myself going around the country giving speeches just as much as, if not more than, I’m in courtrooms these days. That’s important because we, as lawyers, have to show that our profession tries to help present solutions for our society to make it a better place. We have to be ambassadors for the profession. When we try to provide a voice for the voiceless and we try to make sure that everybody is given equal justice under the law, it helps our profession to be viewed as a noble profession. We should all strive to make sure people understand that our calling is a noble one. We have to live up to that oath that we swore to when we first became lawyers.”

While he is not in the courtroom as often as he used to be, in September Crump traveled to Houston for a civil trial that ended in a settlement minutes before jury selection was to begin. The trial was scheduled after a groundbreaking, unanimous U.S. Supreme Court decision in favor of Crump’s client that affects hundreds of cases around America. “It was the first time in almost 20 years that the Supreme Court ruled against a police officer,” said Crump about Tolan v. Cotton.

The Houston case is one of the many instances where people have contacted Crump and urged him to take their cases. It is also one of the cases that Crump has accepted because he sees injustice resulting from the color of a person’s skin.

“As lawyers, we see such arbitrary prosecution on matters,” said Crump, who also represented the families of Trayvon Martin and Martin Lee Anderson. “We’re going around the country trying to do a lot of work to say, ‘The law should be fair to everybody.’ We’re not asking for anything special, we’re just asking that it be fair.” ■

On July 23, Crump was sworn in as president of the National Bar Association by the Honorable Donald L. Graham, of the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida.

YLD President Gordon Glover: Merging the Law and Technology on the computer at night, on the weekends, and in between meetings,” said Glover, who founded The Glover Law Firm in 2012. He has been practicing plaintiff’s personal injury law in Ocala since graduating from the FSU College of Law in 2005.

“I opened my own firm while my wife was pregnant with twins,” recalled Glover, who resides with his family in Ocala. “I have an office in The Villages and one in Ocala and I share office space with other attorneys in both locations. I do not know if you’ve ever been to The Villages, but you can’t appreciate it until you see it. There are 100,000-plus retirees that live there. It’s a great market. There were not a lot of law firms there when I went out on my own, so I saw an opportunity and I have attempted to capitalize on it. The majority of my case load is in The Villages at this point.

“In The Villages, I have quite a few golf cart accident cases since that is what most people drive to get around town. In fact, some golf carts are considered low-speed vehicles, which means they can travel up to 25 miles-per-hour and can be driven on the highways. The Villages really is a place like no other.”

Glover’s decision to hang his own shingle was based, in part, on his belief that he could harness technology to run a firm with relatively low overhead costs and, therefore, make more money. Embracing technology has also helped him succeed as YLD president.

Not surprisingly, much of Glover’s

On June 26, 2015, Gordon Glover took the oath to become the 67th president of The Florida Bar Young Lawyers Division (YLD). In doing so, Glover became the third FSU College of Law alumnus to hold the post in the past five years.

As the leader of the Bar’s largest division, Glover has been traveling the state representing the YLD and speaking with other young lawyers about how the YLD can assist them. He is passionate about helping new attorneys successfully transition into the practice of law and develop a book of business. The way Glover practices law today is vastly different from before he became president-elect and then president of the YLD.

“In the past two years, since I’ve had to travel almost every week with Bar activities, I’m doing a lot virtually

Florida Bar service revolves around technology. His YLD initiatives include training young lawyers on how to start and operate a virtual law firm, hosting webinars that highlight technological tools lawyers can employ, and collaborating with web-based legal service providers to connect young lawyers with work opportunities. In addition, Glover serves on the technology subcommittee of the Bar’s Vision 2016 Commission.

“One of the main reasons for the Commission is that there is a huge justice gap in America and Florida,” said Glover. “In Florida, it is estimated that 80% of low to moderate income individuals have unmet legal needs. My focus this year is to look at what we can do to help reduce the justice gap, while at the same time help young lawyers get training and work. The 80% unserved market is estimated to be valued at $45 billion, so there is a huge opportunity for young lawyers to get a piece of that pie, while at the same time gaining great experience. And it’s not complex work.

“One of the things we’re working on is revamping The Florida Bar’s referral service by partnering with an online legal service provider that has the technology to connect the unserved segment of the population with lawyers that need work. There are companies out there that do it now and it’s a booming market. I recently learned that last year, investors pumped more than $1 billion into legal technology companies. It is our hope to partner with one of the top legal technology companies in order to make it easy for Florida lawyers to connect with those in need of legal services. I truly believe that a robust online platform will not only help to fill the justice gap, but also help lawyers tap into a new market of potential clients.”

Glover’s priorities also include state-wide initiatives to encourage more diversity on the judiciary and to support young women lawyers in their professional and personal growth. Prompted by 2014 survey results showing that the most important issue for young lawyers is quality of life, Glover is also focused on how the YLD can help members in terms of health and wellness.

Glover urges all young lawyers to get involved in The Florida Bar. “It’s important, in particular, for young lawyers to get engaged and stay in tune with what’s going on in the rapidly changing legal marketplace. The decisions made today will impact young lawyers more so than any other segment of the profession. They need to stay informed and really voice their opinion because their opinion matters and people are listening, especially the decision makers within the Bar.”

Although he is passionate about his Florida Bar service, Glover is looking forward to growing his practice after his presidential term ends next summer. For now, Glover attends to his non-Bar work after the sun has set.

“I work when I can,” joked Glover. “It is usually at night after my kids go to bed. It’s a balancing act, but I’ve been able to pull it off so far.”

Now three-and-a-half, Glover’s twins, Elsa and Bennett, and his wife, Ashley, often join him as he travels around the state for the Bar.

The Glovers met when they were freshmen at the University of Florida. “She joined a sorority and I joined a fraternity. Two weeks into my freshman year, my fraternity had a social function with her sorority. We met that evening through a mutual friend that I have known since preschool.”

The two took different paths upon graduating from UF, but started dating after they were paired to walk down the aisle together at a wedding shortly after Glover graduated from law school.

They married two years later in New Orleans and have lived in Ocala since. Their close proximity to Glover’s hometown of Gainesville is convenient, as the Glovers enjoy attending Gator football games. The twins attended their first game in “The Swamp” in 2014.

“They’re cute, but they are wild,” joked Glover about his kids.

Glover credits his wife, who works from home as a recruiter, with being a wonderful mother. He is thankful that she allows him plenty of time to run, which Glover says is his “release.” Glover has already run one marathon and looks forward to a time when he can run another. Perhaps that time will come after his YLD presidency ends next summer. ■

Florida State's LL.M. in American Law for Foreign Lawyers program has seen tremendous growth in recent years. What was once a program that brought one or two students to Tallahassee each year has become a program that draws 10-plus students from around the world annually. In 2015, a record 18 students graduated from Florida State's LL.M. in American Law degree program.

The 2015-16 class of international LL.M. students is slightly smaller than the previous year – it includes 11 students who traveled from as far away as Saudi Arabia to attend classes at the College of Law. All of the students earned law degrees in their home countries before enrolling in the LL.M.

program. Many of them have practiced law and bring that valuable experience with them into the classroom.

"I worked for many years in one of the most prestigious tax law firms in Rio, Brazil, handling tax cases for notorious Brazilian companies," said Renan Santos, whose specialization is taxation. "Subsequent to this experience, I moved to Sao Paulo to be the tax leader of a well-known American company. After some time working for that multinational company, I received an irresistible offer to take over the tax area of a solid law firm in Rio. In all of these positions, I was responsible for all tax related issues, including consultant and litigation, tax planning for foreign companies, initiatives to reduce tax costs, legal assistant for federal, state and local taxes, as well as transfer pricing compliance."

Joanne Pereira finished her law studies in Venezuela shortly before beginning Florida State's LL.M. program. Like many of her classmates, Pereira plans to practice in the United States.

Earning an LL.M. degree may allow students to take bar exams in some jurisdictions, particularly New York, the District of Columbia, California, Washington, and Wisconsin. In addition, students who attend FSU may transfer from the LL.M. program to the J.D. program if they meet certain requirements. The fact that Pereira can take courses this year that may be counted toward her juris doctor degree is one reason Pereira chose Florida State.

“My dad is from Miami and I really want to work in South Florida – all my family lives in Miami,” said Pereira, who has dual citizenship in the United States and Venezuela. “I really want to transfer to the Juris Doctor program at Florida State. If I’m able to transfer and earn my J.D. from Florida State, I want to take the Florida bar examination and practice law in Miami. It is well known that Miami has a lot of Latin Americans and South American people and there is a growing community of Venezuelans right now. I want to pursue corporate law and there are many big corporations from Venezuela that are either changing their residence to South Florida or expanding their needs to South Florida. My main focus would be to work within that Venezuelan community and within those corporations.”

During the 24-credit program, LL.M. students immerse themselves in learning about our country’s legal system. Required courses for the degree are Legal Research & Writing and Introduction to American Law. Students can tailor their remaining courses to their particular interests and career aspirations by choosing courses from among those offered in the J.D.

program. Santos, for example, is taking advantage of Florida State’s strong program in business and tax law. One of his elective classes this semester is Taxation.

Students from Latin American and Caribbean nations have another incentive to attend Florida State: under Florida law, they qualify for in-state tuition with a small scholarship.

Pereira and Santos have both been enjoying their experiences at Florida State.

“I love the university,” said Pereira. “The school is completely different from what I’m used to. I come from a civil law country, so everything is new even though I’m a lawyer. I couldn’t imagine how different two legal systems could be.

“I’ve never been to a small town in the United States where everything is regarding the university – we don’t have college towns in my country – but so far it has been a great experience. I’ve been enjoying it a lot.”

Even before she arrived on campus, Pereira felt welcomed by members of the College of Law community. “Since I sent the first e-mail to the university, even before starting the application process, I felt Florida State University wanted me to apply. My communications were wonderful.”

Santos has been especially pleased with the law faculty. “I was impressed with the facilities and satisfied with the technical ability of Florida State professors and the easy access to them. We can see that professors here have a foundation, can express themselves.”

Groundbreaking Civil Rights Attorney Fred Gray Speaks at Law School

On August 27, historic civil rights attorney and author Fred Gray gave a public lecture to a packed lecture hall at the College of Law. Gray's remarks were the first part of a Civil Rights Litigation class he is co-teaching at the law school during the fall 2015 semester with alumnus Dan Soloway ('85). In addition to students and faculty members in attendance, many distinguished members of the community came to the College of Law to hear Gray speak.

"It was an honor to have Attorney Gray at our law school to speak to our students and to the community," said Dean Donald J. Weidner. "His work is truly groundbreaking."

Gray practices law in Alabama and has litigated some of the nation's most transformative civil rights cases. During his 60-year legal career, Gray represented Rosa Parks, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Montgomery Bus Boycott participants, students who fought segregation in Alabama's educational system, and marchers in the Selma-to-Montgomery March preceding the passage of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Gray was the first African American president of the Alabama State Bar.

During his lively and inspiring remarks, Gray asked his students questions and addressed many of the distinguished guests who were in attendance. He spoke about race relations in the United States, recalled highlights of his career and discussed the role that he and other lawyers played in the civil rights movement.

"I've devoted most of my 60 years primarily to protecting the rights of African Americans," said Gray. "The rights that we have been able to obtain have expanded across the nation and around the world. As a result of those early activities, we now are able to reap the benefits and I think that's great."

Gray, who was one of the first African Americans to be elected to and serve in the Alabama Legislature since Reconstruction, also stressed the importance of making every vote count in 2016. "Next year is an election year; we're going to be electing people all over this country. This, in my opinion, will probably be the most important election year during my 60 years of law practice. We have gained a great deal – we've made a tremendous amount of progress – but we are at a point in this country and in the fight for equal rights for all Americans, including women and minorities, if we don't elect the right persons to office next year, we could see some of the gains that we have made erode."

Toward the end of his remarks, Gray said, "I say to you students, don't be afraid and don't be too concerned about how many people are going to follow you or about what one person can do. If you are able to inspire people, if you see a wrong, do what you can toward helping it."

Immediately following the lecture, the law school hosted a reception to honor Gray, where he signed copies of his book, Bus Ride to Justice, and took photos with attendees.

To view Gray's lecture on the College of Law website, visit law.fsu.edu/fred-gray-lecture.

Students, professors and community members packed the College of Law's largest lecture hall to hear Gray's remarks.

Students Land Prestigious Clerkships

Several Florida State law students and 2015 graduates recently have been offered judicial clerkships. They did so after impressing judges during the very competitive judicial clerkship application process. Our law students have a strong record when it comes to obtaining these prestigious positions – according to ABA data, Florida State is the #1 law school in Florida in terms of the percentage of class of 2014 graduates employed in full-time, long-term judicial clerkships.

The following current students and recent graduates have obtained coveted judicial clerkships:

- Allie Akre ('16) will clerk for Judge Joel F. Dubina, a senior judge on the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit,
- Sarah Logan Beasley ('16) will clerk for Judge Mark E. Walker, of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida,
- Kristen Bond ('15) will clerk for Judge Robert M. Gross, of the Florida Fourth District Court of Appeal,
- Kamryn Deegan ('16) will clerk for Judge Carlos E. Mendoza, of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida,
- Lauren Gentry ('15) will clerk for Magistrate Judge Patricia D. Barksdale, of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida,
- Edward Grodin ('15) will clerk for the Department of Justice, Executive Office for Immigration Review-Office of the Chief Immigration Judge at the Immigration Court in Orlando,
- Andrea Guzman ('15) will clerk for Justice James E.C. Perry, of the Florida Supreme Court,
- Joseph Hart ('16) will clerk for Judge James Randal Hall, of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Georgia,
- Sarah Haston ('15) will clerk for Judge Robert Lewis Hinkle, of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida,
- Kaitlin Holmes ('15) will clerk for the Florida Second Judicial Circuit,
- Andrew Missel ('15) will clerk for Judge Mark E. Walker, of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Florida, and then for Judge Susan Graber, of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit,
- Joshua Pratt ('15) will clerk for Justice Charles T. Canady, of the Florida Supreme Court,
- William Jay Repko ('15) will clerk for Judge Dudley H. Bowen, Jr., of United States District Court for the Southern District of Georgia,
- Christopher Roberts ('15) will clerk for Magistrate Judge James R. Klindt, of the United States District Court for the Middle District of Florida,
- Carrie Rosato ('15) will clerk for Judge Robert M. Gross, of the Florida Fourth District Court of Appeal,
- Erica Steinmiller-Perdomo ('15) will clerk for Chief Justice Jorge Labarga, of the Florida Supreme Court, and
- Francisco Zornosa ('15) will clerk for Judge Madeline Hailkala, of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Alabama.

In addition, more class of 2016 members are likely to obtain clerkships in the future.

From writing letters of recommendation to advising students on the application process, many College of Law faculty and staff members make themselves available to help students who want to obtain clerkships.

“The law school faculty and staff were essential resources throughout the clerkship application process,” said 3L Allie Akre. “Initially, a number of faculty members encouraged me to apply, and offered guidance about how to make my application stand out. I had help from several professors who answered all of my questions, and of course wrote my letters of recommendation. Florida State’s staff also provided invaluable administrative support, from helping me print out the hundreds of applications to mailing them out across the country.

“I think I was successful in obtaining a federal clerkship because of the support I received from the FSU faculty, staff, and law students. I think most students applying for clerkships have similar grades and extracurricular activities, but what set me apart was having the FSU law school community behind me.”

The College of Law constantly seeks ways to increase judicial clerkship opportunities for graduates. Each year, members of the faculty and administration invite judges to campus. The law school’s ‘Jurist in Residence Program’ has brought federal judges from around the nation to the College of Law to meet with top students. In addition to introducing our students to these high-level judges, the program also exposes the judges to our talented students and faculty, bolstering our national reputation.

“We are invested in the professional futures of our students and understand that judicial clerkships can provide excellent training grounds for newly-minted lawyers,” said Assistant Dean for Student Affairs Janeia Daniels Ingram, who began her career as a clerk for the Florida First District Court of Appeal after graduating from the College of Law in 2003. “The fact that more and more federal judges, on both regional and national levels, are taking notice of Florida State is a testament to the high caliber of students and faculty that make up our law school community.”

FSU Law Faculty Ranked #1 in Florida and Among the Nation’s Best

According to a 2015 study of law faculty scholarly impact, the Florida State University College of Law faculty is #1 in Florida and #39 nationally. Florida State is the only Florida law school ranked in the top 50.

The study ranked the scholarly impact of law faculties at schools in the top third of all ABA-accredited law schools. Originally developed by Professor Brian Leiter of the University of Chicago Law School, the “scholarly impact score” for a law faculty is calculated utilizing the mean and the median of total law journal citations over the past five years for tenured faculty members.

“Our faculty scholarship enhances the visibility of our school and the marketability of our students,” said Dean Donald J. Weidner. “I am especially grateful to the alumni who have contributed to professorships and chairs that help us retain and recruit top scholars.”

The nation’s top three schools were Yale, Harvard and the University of Chicago.

Mock Trial Teams Win Two National Competitions in Two Weeks

On October 11, the Florida State University College of Law Mock Trial Team won first place in the National Trial Advocacy Tournament sponsored by the University of Florida. The competition, which was held October 9-11 in Gainesville, involved a criminal trial.

A total of 13 teams participated in the tournament, including a team from the University of California – Los Angeles School of Law, which Florida State beat in the final round of competition. Other law schools competing included Fordham University, The University of Alabama, University of Georgia and University of Richmond.

Winning team members are second-year students Lauryn Collier, from Charlotte, North Carolina, Lolia Y. Fernandez, from Pembroke Pines, Charles LeCocq, from Las Cruces, New Mexico, and Rico Lively, from Naples. College of Law alumnus Adrian Mood ('13), who is an assistant state attorney in Tallahassee, and Patrick Kinni, who practices with the Leon County Attorney's Office in Tallahassee, coached the team to victory.

“We really didn’t think we were going to win at the start of the competition, but once you’re in the moment, in the trial, all of the training and preparation comes to you, almost unconsciously,” said Collier. “We had some very tough opponents, especially in the semifinals and final round, but through it all we performed well and advocated to the best of our ability. The best part, other than the win, was getting to know each other and help each other reach our full potential as trial advocates.”

The Mock Trial Team also won first place in the National Criminal Trial Advocacy Competition sponsored by the California Attorneys for Criminal Justice and UC Hastings College of the Law. The competition was held October 15-18 in San Francisco.

A total of 25 teams participated in the competition, including a team from host school University of California Hastings College of the Law, which Florida State beat in the final round. Florida State also beat a team from Northwestern University School of Law in the semi-finals. Other law schools competing included University of California – Berkeley, University of California – Davis, Fordham University and Pepperdine University.

Winning team members are third-year students Louis

Baptiste, from Palm Beach, MaryCatherine Crock, from Daytona Beach, Samuel Gilot, from Miami, and Lexie Miller, from Gainesville. College of Law alumni Eric Abrahamsen ('07), a partner at the Law Offices of Friedman, Frank and Abrahamsen in Tallahassee, and Georgia Cappleman ('02), a deputy assistant state attorney in Tallahassee, coached the first-place team.

“The members of our team spent countless hours preparing for competition both in and out of the courtroom,” said Crock. “The team’s win in Gainesville gave us all a bit of momentum and when it was finally time to compete in San Francisco, we were ready to put our preparation to the test. Thankfully, we were able to bring another win to Tallahassee. Go ‘Noles!”

“Congratulations to our wonderful student advocates and to their coaches,” said Dean Donald J. Weidner. “These first-place wins in national competitions are a testament to the excellence of our students, who are lovely people, and our advocacy program.”

Thanks to Our 2014-2015 Donors

Gifts to Florida State University College of Law provide critical support for students, faculty and academic programs. This Annual Report is one way of expressing our appreciation for all gifts received between July 1, 2014 and June 30, 2015. Gifts received between July 1, 2015 and June 30, 2016 will be recognized in the fall 2016 issue of Florida State Law.

Thank you so much! We hope that our progress over the years has shown that we are putting your contributed dollars to good use.

We strive to produce a complete and accurate report. Please call any errors or omissions to the attention of:

Dean's Annual Fundraising Report

Dear Alumni and Friends:

This was a year of great success for the law school. The reputation of our outstanding students, faculty and alumni continues to blossom. Most importantly, we have the best job placement rate in Florida and one of the best in the region.

Private fundraising makes a critical difference at the law school, helping us to attract and to support the best students and faculty.

TOTAL GIFTS AND PLEDGES

Putting annual giving and larger gifts together, we raised a cash total of $1,143,849 and unamortized pledges in the amount of $3,254,000, for a grand total of $4,397,849.

ANNUAL GIVING FROM ALUMNI

This past year, 30.03% of our alumni made cash gifts to the law school. Based on the latest American Bar Association data, this level of participation should keep us within the nation's top 10 law schools in terms of alumni giving rate. This level of alumni contributions enriches the life of the school and sends a powerful signal about the enthusiasm our alumni have for the school.

ANNUAL GIVING FROM STUDENTS

This past year, 86.65% of our students contributed to our Annual Fund. Our student enthusiasm and generosity bodes well for the future. They are blazing the trail for us all!

LARGER GIFTS

This past year, we received cash payments on Larger Gifts totaling $56,000 and unamortized pledges on Larger Gifts in the amount of $3,254,000, for a grand total of $3,310,000. The "Cash Gifts By Level" portion of this report includes only cash payments made during the fiscal year, even if they were but a portion of a larger gift. Under the heading of "Recent Larger Gifts," we outline the larger gift commitments that we received in the 2014-2015 fiscal year.

We are deeply grateful to everyone who has contributed to our many successes. We shall continue to do our best to pay great dividends on the dollars you have invested in our school.

Sincerely,

Don Weidner, Dean

Endowed Gift Opportunities

ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIPS

Our single greatest need from private giving is endowed scholarships. To continue to serve our mission of providing access to all, including those from families of modest means, we need significantly more scholarships. Scholarships are awarded according to the intent of the donor and may be based on merit, need or other factors.

The minimum gift needed to endow a scholarship is $25,000. This $25,000 may be paid $5,000 per year for five years.

ENDOWED PROFESSORSHIPS AND CHAIRS

Our faculty members are being recruited by some of the nation's most prominent law schools. Endowed professorships and chairs give us the merit money we need to retain our top faculty.

Endowed professorships and chairs provide salary supplements based on merit. Faculty members are appointed for five-year terms, with renewal contingent on continued scholarly productivity. The appointee bears the name of the donor or the donor's designee.

The minimum gift needed to endow a professorship at Florida State University College of Law is $200,000. The minimum gift needed to endow a chair at Florida State Law is $1,000,000. These gifts may be paid over a five-year period.

ENDOWMENTS FOR EXCELLENCE

Endowments for Excellence are used, at the discretion of the law school, for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars and funding for co-curricular activities such as Law Review, Mock Trial, and Moot Court.

The minimum gift needed to create an Endowment for Excellence is $25,000. This $25,000 may be paid $5,000 per year for five years.

ENDOWMENTS FOR PARTICULAR PROGRAMS

An important goal of the law school is to raise substantial endowments to support special programs and co-curricular organizations.

Private philanthropy has helped us take existing programs to new levels of excellence. Our award-winning Moot Court and Mock Trial Teams cannot travel to competitions without private contributions. Our Public Interest Law Center, which includes the Children's Advocacy Clinic and the Family Law Clinic, relies on private contributions to help pay to train students to provide effective legal services to the under-represented.

Some programs, for example, our Summer for Undergraduates Program, simply would not exist at the law school but for the generous support of our alumni.

The minimum gift needed to create an endowment for a particular program is $25,000. This $25,000 may be paid $5,000 per year for five years.

Phonathon caller and 2L Lauren Storch

DONOR RECOGNITION

We are delighted to recognize scholarships, professorships and other targeted gifts by naming them in honor of the donor or the donor's designee. In addition, we are pleased to acknowledge inter vivos gifts of $200,000 or more with an oil portrait of the donor or the donor's designee that will be displayed in a prominent place at the law school.

The Advocacy Center and the renovated spaces in Roberts Hall give us many new spaces to name to thank donors for gifts starting at $25,000.

For more information, please contact either Dean Don Weidner at 850.644.3071 or dweidner@law.fsu.edu or Jeanne Curtin, Assistant Dean for Development, at 850.644.6357 or jcurtin@law.fsu.edu.

Recent Larger Gift Commitments

We would like to specially thank those of you who made a larger gift commitment between July 1, 2014 and June 30, 2015. These gifts make it possible to continue the dynamic advancement of the academic programs and reputation of the law school.

$1,000,000 AND LARGER

Sheila M. McDevitt ('78) has made a deferred gift of $1,000,000 to supplement the Sheila M. McDevitt Endowment for Excellence she previously established with a cash gift of $100,000. The income distributed from the endowment shall be used, at the discretion of the dean, for purposes including but not limited to faculty support and student scholarships. Sheila also previously gave $50,000 to the Alumni Centennial Endowed Dean's Chair, $25,000 to the Sheila M. McDevitt Term Professorship, and $25,000 to the Sheila M. McDevitt Fund. Sheila lives in St. Petersburg.

An anonymous donor has made a $1,000,000 deferred gift to supplement an endowment previously created by someone else.

$100,000 TO $999,999

William J. (Bill) Cohen ('79) has increased his deferred gift to the law school to $750,000. Bill previously made a $600,000 deferred gift to the law school to create the William J. and Susan P. Cohen Professorship in Environmental Law. The income distributed from the endowment shall be used as a financial incentive to a productive member of the faculty in the area of environmental law. Bill is a principal with Oakbridge Partners, Ltd., a wealth management firm located in Atlanta. Bill has experience in the areas of taxation, estate planning, corporate finance and executive compensation.

The Stoops Family Foundation, Inc. has made a pledge of $600,000 to fund Stoops Scholarships. The funds shall be used for $25,000 scholarships that shall be awarded to attract first-year students who have shown, through their studies and/or their work experiences, a deep commitment to business and the study of business law. These scholarships shall be renewed during the second and third years of law school only if, prior to the beginning of those years, the recipient: a) has demonstrated a commitment, through course selection and otherwise, to earning a Business Law Certificate while in law school at FSU; and b) has, in their first and second years of law school, maintained a cumulative GPA of 80 or higher. Jeffrey A. Stoops ('84) and Aggie Stoops previously endowed the Jeffrey A. Stoops Professorship. In recognition of this latest gift, the law school has named the Student Lounge in Roberts Hall the Stoops Family Student Lounge. Jeff is president and chief executive officer of SBA Communications Corporation, which is based in Boca Raton.

Thomas W. (Tom) Conroy ('74) has made a deferred gift of $250,000 to establish the Thomas W. Conroy Endowment for Excellence. The income distributed from the endowment shall be used, at the discretion of the law school, for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars, and funding for co-curricular activities including Law Review, Mock Trial, and Moot Court. Tom previously gave $150,000 to endow the Thomas W. Conroy Scholarship, which is used to attract top students to the law school. Tom lives in Henderson, Nevada.

Terry Cole ('70) and Linda Cole have created a $200,000 endowment for the Terry and Linda Cole Environmental Law Scholarship. The income distributed from the endowment shall be used, at the discretion of the law school, for scholarships to students in the LL.M. in Environmental Law and Policy program, scholarships to students pursuing a Certificate in Environmental, Energy and Land Use Law, and scholarships to students who are members of the Journal of Land Use & Environmental Law. Terry previously established the Gunster Environmental Law Scholarship with gifts totaling $50,000; the scholarship is awarded each year to a second-year law student who has demonstrated interest in pursuing a career in environmental law and who has an outstanding academic record. In recognition of their latest gift, the law school has named the second-floor classroom in the Advocacy Center the Terry and Linda Cole Classroom. Terry and Linda live in Tallahassee, and he is a shareholder in Gunster. Terry focuses his practice on environmental law, governmental administrative law and litigation.

RECENT LARGER GIFTS

$25,000 TO $49,999

John P. Welch ('74), who passed away on March 22, 2013, made a gift of $32,515 to establish the John Welch Endowment. Upon graduation from law school, John joined Colonel J. McHenry Jones to form Jones and Welch, P.A. in Pensacola. The income distributed from the endowment shall be used, at the discretion of the law school, to provide services and support to law students with physical and non-physical disabilities, and for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars, and funding for co-curricular activities including Law Review, Mock Trial, and Moot Court.

Henry, Buchanan, Hudson, Suber & Carter, P.A. has made a pledge of $30,000 to be used where the need is greatest at the College of Law. Located in Tallahassee, the firm has a diversified general civil practice and represents clients from Pensacola to Jacksonville and as far south as Ocala. In recognition of this commitment, the law school has named a faculty office the Henry Buchanan Law Firm Faculty Office.

Orlando attorney John A. Boudet ('85) and Devon Cook Boudet have made a pledge of $25,000 to create the John Boudet and Devon Cook Endowment for Excellence. The income distributed from the endowment shall be used, at the discretion of the law school, for purposes such as student scholarships, faculty incentives, general discretionary dollars, and funding for co-curricular activities including Law Review, Mock Trial, and Moot Court. In recognition of John and Devon's commitment, the law school has named a faculty office the John Boudet and Devon Cook Faculty Office. John is a shareholder in GrayRobinson. He has a diverse national practice focusing on complex litigation, including class actions, product liability, securities litigation, intellectual property, and environmental and commercial litigation.

Pensacola attorney Larry Hill ('74) and Diane Hill have made a pledge of $25,000 to create the Diane and Larry Hill Family Scholarship. The income distributed from the endowment shall be used to recruit a top student each year to the law school. In recognition of the family's commitment, the law school has named a faculty office the Diane and Larry Hill Family Faculty Office. Larry is a shareholder in Moore, Hill & Westmoreland, P.A. Larry is a board certified civil trial lawyer and in recent years his practice has focused on mass tort litigation and defense of class actions.

SEND US YOUR NEWS

The most avidly read section of Florida State Law alumni magazine is "Class Action." The law school's more than 9,000 alumni want to know what their classmates have been doing – awards they have received, high-profile cases they have won, law firms or cities they have moved to, pro bono activities they have undertaken and more. Just as important: Did you get married? Have a baby? Write a novel? Run a marathon? Perform in a band?

If you have anything that you would like to include in Class Action, please send information to rshepher@law.fsu.edu or mail this form to:

Law School Hosts Professor and Former University of Chicago Dean Saul Levmore

On September 10, the College of Law hosted two events with Saul Levmore, the William B. Graham Distinguished Service Professor of Law and former dean of The University of Chicago Law School.

Levmore addressed College of Law faculty at an enrichment lunch where he spoke about his scholarship on decriminalizing threats. He also spoke to the general law school community, including students, faculty and staff, in a presentation that was open to the public. In his talk titled, “Can Law Regulate Sex (on Campus)?,” Levmore discussed the unintended consequences that might follow new attempts to regulate sex, specifically on university campuses.

Levmore joined the University of Chicago Law School faculty in 1998 and served as dean from 2001-2009. He has been a visiting professor at Yale, Harvard, Michigan and Northwestern. He has taught and written about torts, corporations, copyright, non-profit organizations, comparative law, public choice, corporate tax, commercial law, insurance, and contracts. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, a past president of the American Law Deans Association, and a past trustee of the Law School Admissions Council and of the Skadden Foundation.

Dynamic Student Ambassadors Help Recruit New Students

Stefan Barber

Christina Colbert

Through a special College of Law program, our current students play a vital role in recruiting new students. The student ambassador program has grown tremendously under Assistant Dean for Admissions Jennifer Kessinger. Before Kessinger arrived, a handful of students served as ambassadors each year. Today, more than 50 law students serve as ambassadors through the program, which is managed by Associate Director of Admissions & Recruitment Deborah Gautier.

“I think a lot of college graduates decide to attend law school without giving much thought to the commitment required to succeed,” said Stefan Barber, a third-year FSU law student. “Joining the student ambassador program has allowed me to impart upon prospective students some of the lessons I have learned about choosing the right law school and being a successful law student.”

Barber recognizes the importance of making the right decision about which law school to attend. “We’re not just trying to sell every single prospective student on the College of Law. We really take the time to get to know every prospective student and help them determine if this is the best fit for them.”

Students can become involved with the program in the spring semester of their 1L year, when they are able to share insights into academic and student life experiences at FSU Law. All ambassadors are required to work office hours in the admissions office, often meeting with prospective students to discuss their questions and concerns program in their first year of law school and participate until they graduate. Christina Colbert, a third-year law student, has been a student ambassador since her second semester at the College of Law.

“I decided to become an ambassador because I truly enjoy being a student at FSU College of Law and I wanted to share my experience. What I enjoy most about being an ambassador is the opportunity to be an additional resource for students,” said Colbert.

She also recognized the role alumni play in recruitment efforts. “Alums should know they are essential to our recruiting! We love to tell prospective students about our amazing alumni network and their continuous support of the students here at FSU College of Law.”

Florida State Ranked Nation's 13th Best Value Law School

The National Jurist magazine has ranked Florida State University College of Law the 13th best value law school in the nation. The ranking, which is published in The National Jurist's 'Back to School 2015' issue, weighs important student outcomes – bar passage rate and employment rate – against tuition, cost of living and indebtedness. According to The National Jurist, the rankings are “designed to find the law schools where graduates have excellent chances of passing the bar and getting a legal job without taking on a ton of debt.” This is the seventh year in a row that The National Jurist has ranked Florida State one of the nation's top 15 best value law schools.

The national ranking reflects the law school's strong student outcomes. Florida State graduates passed the most recent administration of the Florida Bar Examination at a rate of 80.3%. By contrast, the overall passing rate for first-time test takers was 68.9%. Additionally, according to U.S. News & World Report (2015), Florida State is Florida's #1 law school, and the nation's 26th best, in terms of job placement.

“We are thrilled to be ranked once again as one of the nation's best law schools in terms of value, especially because employment rate is the highest weighted factor in this ranking,” said Dean Donald J. Weidner. “Launching the careers of our students remains the most important thing we do.”

According to The National Jurist, the rankings are “designed to find the law schools where graduates have excellent chances of passing the bar and getting a legal job without taking on a ton of debt.”

Thirty Percent of Alumni Contribute to the Law School

Thank you to the 30 percent of Florida State University College of Law alumni who made cash contributions to the law school during the 2014-15 fiscal year! This rate exceeds previous results that placed Florida State among the nation's top 10 law schools in terms of alumni contribution rate, according to the most recently published American Bar Association data. Those data also showed that Florida State's giving rate was more than triple the giving rate of any other Florida law school.

“We are especially grateful to the 85 alumni who volunteered to serve as class agents,” said Dean Donald J. Weidner.

“We are especially grateful to the 85 alumni who volunteered to serve as class agents,” said Dean Donald J. Weidner. “Our tremendously engaged alumni are always eager to help the law school – the most important way they do that is by bringing job opportunities to our students.”

Host of the Popular Thomas Jefferson Hour Show Visits Law School

Clay Jenkinson, author, first-person-interpreter and host of the award-winning radio program The Thomas Jefferson Hour, visited the College of Law for a unique presentation on October 14. The event was well attended by students and faculty, as well as members of the community.

Stearns Weaver Miller shareholder Glenn Burhans introduced Jenkinson to the crowd. After a short video featuring Jenkinson “as” Thomas Jefferson, Jenkinson spoke extensively on Jefferson’s role in the formation of our country’s laws. He discussed topics ranging from the Constitution and Bill of Rights to Jefferson’s presidency and his views on the role of the Supreme Court. Jenkinson also touched on Jefferson’s relationships with other key figures in U.S. history, including U.S. Supreme Court Chief Justice John Marshall and President James Madison.

The event was sponsored by Stearns Weaver Miller, the Student Bar Association, The Federalist Society, the Democratic Law Students Association and the Office of Student Affairs.

Check Out Our New LAW.FSU.EDU Website!

This summer, the College of Law completed a 10-month web overhaul and launched the final phases of a brand new website. The project was initiated in fall 2014 in order to improve the usability of the site and to create a more modern design. Primary goals were to develop intuitive navigation, to provide visitors easy access to the content they need, and to make the site mobile-friendly. Although the site’s primary audience is prospective students, important information for current students, faculty, alums, and friends of the law school is still available. You can find news and information specifically for alumni in the “Alumni” section of the new site. Student and alumni profiles are featured on the homepage and in a special “Featured Profiles” section of the site.

Final Four Competition Showcases Talented Students

In this year's Moot Court Final Four Competition, held on October 14, second-year law students Beatriz Benitez, Bailey Howard, Nora Porter and Steven Reardon argued at the Florida Supreme Court in front of justices and First District Court of Appeal judges. The students presented oral arguments on a fictitious case in which a church's applications for a building permit were denied due to a county-imposed zoning regulation. The questions presented were whether the county's denial of the church's applications violated RLU-IPA's substantial burden provision and whether RLUIPA is a constitutional exercise of Congress's power.

After the competition, a reception and awards ceremony were held in the rotunda, where Porter received the 2015 M. Stephen Turner Outstanding Appellate Advocate Award from Florida Supreme Court Chief Justice Jorge Labarga for being the competition's best oral advocate. The 2015 Final Four Competition and reception were sponsored by Stephen and Susan Turner.

FSU Law Students Attend Florida Bar Business Law Section Event

Four College of Law students were selected to attend the 20th Annual Florida Bar Business Law Section (BLS) Labor Day Retreat in Naples this year. Barron Dickinson (3L), Tabitha Herrera (2L), Chelsea Nelson (3L) and Yoe Lopez (2L) joined Florida lawyers for the September 4-7 event, where they were paired with mentors and attended various sessions and networking receptions. The BLS Membership Committee covered the cost of registration for the students and travel stipends were covered by an anonymously funded endowment.

The Florida Bar President Abadin Meets with Students

Ray Abadin

Ray Abadin, president of The Florida Bar and a partner at Sedgwick LLP, visited the College of Law in October to speak with students about the future of the Florida Bar Exam and new lawyer competencies. The discussion was held over lunch in the rotunda, where students were encouraged to voice their questions and concerns about the bar exam, as well as other issues facing Florida law students and lawyers. The event was hosted by FSU's Student Bar Association, Cuban American Bar Association and Young Lawyers Division.

FSU Law Hosts Advanced Legal Writing CLE

On, Thursday, October 15, hundreds of Florida attorneys gathered at the law school for a CLE, "Advanced Legal Writing and Editing: Beyond Logic to Coherence and Strength." The day-long program, sponsored by the National Attorneys General Training & Research Institute and the Office of the Florida Attorney General, was presented by Professor Timothy P. Terrell, of the Emory University School of Law. Topics of instruction included editing, writing strong introductions, organizing information, and structuring sentences and paragraphs. The CLE was open to attorneys, paralegals and legal assistants for Florida government agencies. Many of the state's high-level attorneys were on campus for the training. Tyler Cathey, who is the chief deputy attorney general for the Office of the Florida Attorney General, welcomed attendees to the CLE.
