From the Dean

The deadline to make a gift to the annual fund is this Sunday, June 30, and we are very grateful for the many alumni who have already generously contributed! If you haven't yet done so, we hope you will consider making a gift in any amount and joining the more than 25% of alumni who have participated. You can donate online at give.fsu.edu/law, where you will have the option to earmark your gift as you wish. For those who would like to support our current Pave the Way Campaign for student scholarships, simply select "scholarships" from the designation dropdown menu. Your support of FSU Law and our students makes a tremendous impact and is critical to our future success!

Prof. Logan's Scholarship Cited in U.S. Supreme Court Dissent

An article by Wayne A. Logan, the Gary & Sallyn Pajcic Professor at FSU Law, was recently quoted in the dissent authored by U.S. Supreme Court Justice Neil Gorsuch (joined by Chief Justice Roberts and Justice Thomas) in Gundy v. United States. Logan's article, "The Adam Walsh Act and the Failed Promise of Administrative Federalism," was published in the George Washington Law Review in 2010. Gundy addressed whether Congress impermissibly delegated its legislative power to a federal agency, the Department of Justice, when it directed DOJ to decide whether the Adam Walsh Act was to be retroactive in its effect. The court rejected the "non-delegation" challenge but Justice Gorsuch's dissent will likely figure in future challenges. Professor Logan's George Washington Law Review article is part of his larger body of work concerning sex offender registration and community notification laws (a.k.a. "Megan's Laws"), including his book Knowledge as Power: Criminal Registration and Community Notification Laws in America (Stanford Univiversity Press, 2009), which was cited by the U.S. Supreme Court in the majority opinion in United States v. Kebodeaux, 570 U.S. 387 (2013).

Alum Profile: Elizabeth Chamblee Burch ('04)

Elizabeth Chamblee Burch is the Fuller E. Callaway Chair of Law at the University of Georgia School of Law. She teaches and researches in the areas of civil procedure, class actions and mass torts. Her new book, Mass Tort Deals: Backroom Bargaining in Multidistrict Litigation, was just published with Cambridge University Press and her scholarship has been published in the New York University Law Review, Cornell Law Review, Virginia Law Review and Vanderbilt Law Review, among others. In 2015, Burch earned the American Law Institute's Early Career Scholars Medal in recognition of her work on class actions and multidistrict litigation, and its potential to influence improvements in the law. She was elected to membership in the American Law Institute in 2013. Before joining the UGA law faculty in 2011, Burch was an associate professor at FSU Law, where she received a Graduate Teaching Award and was voted "Professor of the Year." Prior to entering academia, Burch practiced at Holland & Knight in Atlanta.

"Procedure makes the world go 'round. If you want to save substantive law, you have to start with the procedures that bring it to life. And that's true for everything from an individual sexual harassment suit to massive proceedings over opioids, talcum powder and pelvic mesh."

Student Profile: 2019 Grad Carter McMillan

Desired Practice Location: Tallahassee, but open to other opportunities Field of Law Sought: Primary interests are in family law, government law and policy, prison reform and public interest law; also open to nontraditional law positions

Carter McMillan is originally from Tallahassee. A double 'Nole, she earned a bachelor's degree in English literature from Florida State University and is a May 2019 graduate of FSU Law. From July 2018 to May 2019, McMillan was a legislative intern at PinPoint Results, LLC.
