Faculty & Alum Profile: Hilary Powell

Hilary Powell graduated from the Florida State University College of Law in 2003. Following this, she worked as a legal affairs and technical advisor in the WTO in various positions since 2003. She uses her legal background to offer technical and policy advice, and conducts trade policy research and analysis. She has worked for the WTO since 2003, where she delivers technical assistance activities, provides training, and deals with legal affairs.

"Working at the WTO requires a sound foundation in a range of law. FSU College of Law provided me with that foundation; in particular, the opportunity to work as a research assistant was invaluable. I learned so much as a student at FSU Law and I am thrilled to continue in this capacity with the WTO."

Alum Profile: Maegan E. McCann ('11)

"Strong legal writing skills lay the foundation for a successful legal career. The advanced writing course offered by the FSU Law Writing Center was a critical component of my education and made the difference in my success."

We welcomed new FSU Law students to campus during this week's orientation. The group is extremely enthusiastic and includes students enrolled in our J.D., Juris Master and LL.M. programs. 1L students graduated from 70 undergraduate institutions with 54 different majors. This year's new J.D. 1L class is making history with the highest number of out-of-state students in a decade. In addition, 64 students attend orientation, but we are delighted to report that this is by far the largest class.

"I have had an interest in criminal law since the beginning of my career. I became a prosecutor in the Second Judicial Circuit here in Tallahassee or the surrounding counties. I have always had a particular interest in criminal law and have always been interested in working on cases involving serious crimes."
