Working at FDACS has been an amazing experience for Kennedy. She has had the opportunity to work on a variety of cases, from administrative law matters to environmental law. She has also had the chance to work on cases involving natural resource law, which is a field that she is particularly interested in. "I have learned that agricultural law is so much more than just farming and horse feed," said Kennedy. "It is about understanding the complex laws that govern the industry and being able to apply that knowledge to real-world situations."
